THIS is the land of no poverty, having been settled by Swiss and Portuguese immigrants long ago. The Swiss are dairymen, the Portuguese do general farming; both work hard, always, hence the "no poverty."

At first it was embarrassing for the good priest, who celebrated a solemn festival with feeding the poor, a necessary part of the ceremonies. However, his parishioners oblige by pretending to be poor once a year, and it goes smoothly.

* * *

As you motor 50-odd miles along the Pacific from San Louis to this ranch, the moon sinking in the ocean, to rise presently in China, behaves strangely.

It appears, on your left, from behind a rock 300 feet high. Then it rises above a hill on your right, and presently it is behind you.

The moon seems to behave as, for many of us, success seems to behave. It appears in all directions, unreasonably, and always out of reach. But ... the winding road we follow that ... the seeming unreasonableness. If we went straight ahead moon and success would not jump around.

* * *

"WHISTLE" MANINCH, who drives the big Packard car for Senor Zegar, says, "No fog, so we ... go on nicely"—this is to reassure you. He does 70 nicely, telling you the cows do not get on the road as much as they used to do, and anyway, with the moon you can see them.

* * *

It is a queer shaped moon, looking like a penny you used to put on the railroad track after the train has passed over it.

Miss Katherine Dayton, who is distinctly highbrow and writes for Horace Lorimer, tells you later that it was a "gibbous" moon. Whatever it was, it gave little light as it dropped into the Pacific.

* * *

"Every once in a while," says Whistle, and his saying is important to railroad presidents, "some of us boys run down to Los Angeles.

"Five four of us, in a small car, the round trip, 440 miles, costs us each about $1.10, including some running around in Los Angeles."

The railroad fare, one way, is more than eight dollars, as against the cost of 55 cents one way by perfected motor car.

* * *

That fact, plus airplane competition, will call for railroad attention some day.

Mr. Smith, late president of the New York Central, planned an elevated road above his track for suburban motor traffic, automobile tolls to reimburse the railroad, while serving the public.

* * *

PAUL SHOUP might build an overhead road above the tracks from San Diego to his Portland terminal and on to Seattle, with no crossroads to create delay or danger. Tolls on private automobiles would pay well, and "light railroad-owned automobile busses would multiply railroad dividends, making many passenger trains unnecessary.

A light automobile carries more than its weight in passengers. The average Pullman car averages less than 5 per cent of its weight in passengers. Some one will try this, perhaps E. E. Crowley of the New York Central, carrying out his predecessor's idea, Mr. Shoup, perhaps Gen. Atterbury of the Pennsylvania, with a locomotive from New York to Philadelphia, or W. B. Storey of the Santa Fe.

* * *

All these men have, wisely, adopted the motor car as an auxiliary. Not one has adopted the light, cheap transportation made possible by the gas engine, the marvelous uninterrupted way above the tracks.

SOCKS BANDIT

Youth Saves Father's Life and Frustrates Holdup

COLUMBUS, Feb. 10—John Noles, 15, today probably saved the life of his father and frustrated an attempted holdup and robbery of his father's drug store here.

F. A. Noles, the father, and his three sons, John, Francis, 17, and William, 20, had just opened the store this morning and found a man in the rear room. As the man pointed a gun at the father, John picked up a broom and struck the bandit over the arm. He fired one shot at William, but the bullet went wild, and the man fled.

COUNTY PLANS ROAD PROGRAM

61 Miles To Be Surface-Treated This Year, Surveyor Says

GUARD RAILS BUILT

Equipment for Traffic Protection Now Being Installed Along Highways

Marion county's tentative road repair program for next summer calls for surface treating, and repairing in other ways of 61 miles of county highways, Cecil R. Leavens, county surveyor, stated today.

Leavens and O. C. McCurdy, O. W. Klingamon and W. M. King, members of the board of county commissioners, will make their annual inspection tour of county highways some time in March, it was stated today. After this trip the surveyor will map out the definite program for road repair during the summer.

Three-Year Schedule

The county's permanent program calls for surface treating of all hard surfaced county roads once each three years. Last year 75 miles of county highways were covered in the work.

Although the road repair activities of the surveyor's forces are consider-

They were ordered to appear at various times during the week. The 10 who appeared this morning were ordered to repair their lights, and to return and demonstrate to the satisfaction of police that the lights are functioning properly. Then they will receive the $2 back.

Discarded Steel Rails Remade Into Many Useful Products At Local Plant

HOW discarded steel rails are rejuvenated and remade into a hundred different useful products is the interesting spectacle revealed to a visitor of the Pollak Steel Co. plant, Cheney av.

There are just 20 mills in the country known as rail steel mills, and among them is the local Pollak mill. Close to a million tons of rails are replaced annually by railroad companies, the greater portion of the discarded rails finding their way into these great mills. The quality of steel in a rail is of the best, and for this reason the rails are especially suitable for manufacture of the many products of the local plant.

Starting at the south end of the plant, one may see great piles of rails, over 10,000 tons of them, neatly piled according to size and weight. After being cut into uniform lengths, they are fed to the furnace, one by one.

Reach White Heat

Each rail is "soaked" in heat, the temperature being gradually increased until the rails are a gleaming white throughout. Suddenly, a small door in the end of the furnace opens, and one of the white bars shoots out over a narrow runway towards a slitting roll. At this point the rail is neatly split lengthwise into three pieces, the head or top, the web or upright portion, and the flange or bottom piece.

Waiting at the mouth of the splitting roll are three workmen, each of whom grasps one of the split sections with tongs. With amazing confidence, the workmen proceed to race these ribbons of flaming steel through rollers, which somewhat resemble a washing machine wringer, which reduce the sections of rail to long orange colored ropes of steel, or to any number of shapes which later become parts of farm implements, gang plows, wheat combines, which find their fields of service throughout the United

FRIEND BURNED TRYING RESCUE

Mrs. Wayne Walton Makes Futile Effort To Save Mrs. Sarah Courtad, 71

ENVELOPED IN FLAMES

Bathroom of Courtad Home Is Scene of Fatal Accident

Mrs. Sarah Courtad, 71, died at 10:30 o'clock last night of shock and burns caused by her clothing catching fire from an open stove in the bathroom of her home, 193 East Columbia st., Saturday night about 10 o'clock.

In an attempt to extinguish the flames, which enveloped Mrs. Courtad, Mrs. Wayne Walton, for whom a bath was being prepared, severely burned her own hands.

Mrs. Courtad, who was unusually active for her advanced years, went to the bathroom to light the fire and draw the water for Mrs. Walton's bath. After lighting the fire in a small open bathroom stove, she turned to the tub to turn on the water. The hem of her long, full skirts caught in the open fire, and in an instant the flames had leaped upward.

Rescue Attempt Futile

Valnir Mrs. Walton tried to put out the fire, but the rug she wrapped around the older woman caught in the flames and burned also. Finally, in a desperate attempt to save Mrs. Courtad from deep burns, Mrs. Walton tore the flaming clothes from her body, and herself sustained deep burns on her hands.

Firemen were called and the fire extinguished. Damage to the bath room was small.

Ointment brought by the firemen was applied to the women's burns until a doctor arrived.

Mrs. Walton and her husband have rooms at the Courtad home, and have been there for some time.

Mrs. Courtad suffered from a weak heart, and those in charge said today that it was shock resulting from fright and the burns that caused the death.

Resident Here Eight Years

Mrs. Courtad was the widow of John Courtad, and for eight years had made her home in Marion, at 193 East Columbia st. Most of her life was spent near Upper Sandusky. She was born in Sandusky Feb. 2, 1859, to Timothy and Mary Casey, both dead.

Fred M. Courtad and Miss Clara M. Courtad, a son and daughter, live at home. William C. Courtad, a son, lives on Oak st., and another son, Frank J. Courtad, is living on West Church st. Ernest B. Courtad, a son, lives in Upper Sandusky, and a daughter, Miss Mayme Courtad, is living in Columbus.

Four grandchildren are living and a brother, John Casey, lives in Upper Sandusky. Five sisters and a brother preceded Mrs. Courtad in death.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning at St. Mary's Catholic church, with the Rev. William J. Spickerman, pastor, officiating. Burial will be made in St. Mary's Catholic cemetery.

The body will be removed to the Courtad home late this afternoon from the Hess, Markert & Axe funeral home, East Church st.

A Story of Life and Love in Hollywood

AN UNPLEASANT AWAKENING

THE pineapple ornamental chiffonier, painted gray, was the first object which Kellogg saw, and he closed his eyes immediately, as if the sight were not at all pleasant. He sat slowly up, swung long legs from under the lumpy covers, and went to the heap of clothes on the scuffed leatherette chair.

Here he found cigaret and matches.

Kellogg, sitting gravely on the mattress— the sheet had been rumpled back and feathers protruded as from a moulting goose—did not seem to belong in the somber room; he looked about him as if seeing it for the first time. A train hammered past, and Kellogg stared thoughtfully through the gray lace curtains at it, put a hand to his head as if it ached, and then slipped from the bed again and pulled down the shade.

His watch, on the chiffonier, told him that it was almost ten; he was putting it down when the door rattled. John Andrew said, automatically, "Yes," and glanced about quickly for his bag; he did not see it, nor the dressing gown he wanted; he sighed a second time and stood gazing uncertainly at the door.

It opened before John Andrew could decide to get back into the bed.

CHARGES IGNORED AS HUGHES IS APPROVED

Doherty's Attack on Appointment Overlooked by Committee

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—In the face of charges that his appointment to the supreme court would lead to the "disintegration" of the nation's highest tribunal, the nomination of Charles Evans Hughes as chief justice of the United States was approved today by the senate judiciary committee.

The vote was 10 to two, Senators Norris, Republican of Nebraska, and Blaine, Republican of Wisconsin, voting against his confirmation.

It was revealed that Henry L. Doherty, the multi-millionaire capitalist and oil man, had preferred charges against Hughes.

Doherty charged there had been "unseemly haste," in naming Hughes. He regretted the fact the president had given Hughes a promotion on the supreme court after Hughes had "capitalized into wealth the prestige and influence acquired by the honor done him by his (first) appointment" to the court. He said he was alarmed that a "political machine" had been built up in Washington so strong as to be "extended to embrace the judicial branch of the government."

Enters Senatorial Race with Attack on Dry Law

CHICAGO, Feb. 10—Characterizing prohibition as "national tyranny," James Hamilton Lewis today hurled his hat into the ring as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator.

Lewis was elected to the senate during the Wilson administration.

"Marion Day" Set Apart for Benefit of Shoppers

Local Merchants Arrange Special Offering of Bargains on Wednesdays of February and March as Attraction for Persons in Marion's Surrounding Trading Area

During the next 60 days Wednesday will cease to be merely the fourth day of the week. It will take on a new significance as a result of a merchandising program undertaken by 50 Marion merchants and business places.

During February and March Wednesday will be designated as "Marion Day" for the benefit of those living within a radius of 30 miles of Marion. On the Wednesdays in this two-month period Marion merchants will offer special attractions for residents within the shopping area.

Wide Variety of Offerings

The special "Marion Day" features are expected to be more attractive to shoppers than the usual individual sale, since all lines of merchandising are represented in the Wednesday program. The department stores, the women's ready to wear stores, men's clothing stores, shoe stores, meat markets, grocery stores and restaurants are offering specials.

By making one trip do for several, shoppers living away from Marion can effect a sufficient saving to more than pay for their trip here for the Wednesday specials, local merchants believe.

Beginning tonight all stores participating in the "Marion Day" idea will advertise their special sales in The Star. The specials are being advertised two days ahead of the sale in order to give prospective shoppers living away from Marion an opportunity to make their plans to spend Wednesday here.

It is estimated that these advertisements will be read by 25,000 persons living out of Marion but within a 30 miles radius of the city.

FATHER KILLS THREE CHILDREN OF FAMILY

Farmer Ends Own Life After Fatally Wounding Members of Family

COVINGTON, Ga., Feb. 10—Rogers Smith, tenant farmer near here, early today shot and killed his three small children, and then committed suicide.

Smith died instantly from a bullet wound in his head. The children, two boys and a six-year-old girl, died shortly afterward. All were shot through the head.

No reason could be assigned by Mrs. Smith for her husband's action. Smith was prominently known in the community.

MILK FROM OUTSIDE TEST AREA BANNED

Only Product of Tuberculin Guarded Districts To Be Accepted Here

Milk shipped into Marion from townships which have neither been tuberculin tested nor signed for the test will be rejected in the future, Dr. J. F. Gruber, inspector of meats and milk ruled today.

This rule directly affects one Marion township and a number of townships in other counties. Scott township is the only one in Marion county which is neither tested nor booked for the tuberculin test.

Completion of the test in Marion township last week brought a total of 11 townships tested for bovine tuberculosis, Dr. Gruber stated today. Claridon, Big Island and Tully townships are signed.

The rule, which is already a part of the milk code, was not declared in effect until all townships had been given an opportunity to sign for the test. It is thought that a large number of cattle shippers in Scott township, who buy calves, fatten them and ship them, are objecting to the test in that area, claiming such a test would be of no direct benefit to them.

TOLEDOAN CONFESSES TO ROBBING BANK

Love for Fine Automobiles Results in His Arrest at Sandusky

SANDUSKY, Feb. 10—The love of Lawrence MacMillan, 21, of Toledo, for fine cars today resulted in his arrest and subsequent confession to the $3,500 bank robbery at Berlin Heights recently, according to Sheriff John W. Parker.

Suspicions against MacMillan were aroused the other day when he "stepped out" in a new automobile of an expensive make. When he was taken into custody for questioning, the man confessed his participation in the bank robbery, according to Parker, and named his accomplice, who is now believed to be in Florida.

Search for MacMillan's accomplice is under way, Parker said.

The Berlin Heights bank was held up and robbed several weeks ago by two young men who were described as "gentlemen bandits." The robbers looted $3,500 from the institution and fled in a small automobile.

CONFESSES SLAYING OF YOUNG WOMAN

Man Believed Mentally Unbalanced; Brother, Father Uncover Grave

MUSKEGON, Mich., Feb. 10—Forest E. Weaver, 20, confessed today to Sheriff William Tissue that he shot Mrs. Gladys Erhardt, 20, through the heart, severed her head and buried the body in a wood near his home Friday.

The grave was discovered by Weaver's brother, George, 18, who noticed blood-stains in the snow after he had become suspicious when the young woman failed to return with Weaver.

Sheriff Tissue and others opened the grave and found the girl's mutilated body. In the party was J. O. Weaver, father of the confessed slayer. When he saw the girl's head he said, "Arrest my oldest son."

The confessed killer, according to his relatives, has been mentally unbalanced for months. He has worn cowboy boots and spurs and large "ten-gallon" hats.

He exhibited the revolver with which he said he killed the girl and proudly pointed to a new notch he has made on the gun handle.

President Hoover and Party Put Out to Sea for Week of Deep Sea Fishing Off Coast of Florida

LONG KEY, Fla., Feb. 10—President Hoover put out to sea from this tiny fishing camp on the Florida Keys today to do a little deep sea fishing.

Cocoanut palms, gleaming expanses of white sand beach and clear blue water stretching to the horizon furnished a tropical setting for the start of his week's holiday that was in marked contrast to the chill winter weather of the national capitol he and his party left on Saturday midnight.

The Havana Special pulled into Long Key shortly before 8 o'clock this morning but it was 7:30 before Mr. and Mrs. Hoover and their guests left the railroad siding for the houseboat "Sauniterer" which will be their floating home and fishing base until next Monday.

Only Jeremiah Milbank, from whom the president chartered the "Sauniterer" and Mrs. Milbank were on hand to greet the executive. They walked promptly down the palm-lined path to the pier on the Gulf of Mexico side of the narrow key and boarded the 98-foot craft. From its mast flew the presidential ensign.

Associate Justice and Mrs. Harlan F. Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, and Dr. Vernon Kellogg joined the Hoovers aboard the "Sauniterer." Secretary to the President, and Mrs. Lawrence Richey, and Commander Joel T. Boone went on the "Kilkenny," a department of commerce boat who pulled up at the dock.

By 8 o'clock the two boats, followed by the "Terrigan," another commerce craft upon which were the secret service men, had weighed anchor and started for the fishing grounds.

It is, no doubt, customary to look upon a wicked past with apathy, after time has intervened.

Extravagant people sometimes practice stinginess for a day or two. It is a kind of pastime.

FOOD FOR THE FAT

TWO GRAINS OF GLAND FOOD DAILY THEN THE FOODS YOU LOVE

FAT people, of course, should not over-eat. They rarely do. But starvation is a very risky way to reduce.

Modern science finds that a common cause of excess fat lies in an under-active gland. That gland largely controls nutrition. People grow fat when its secretions are scanty, despite all exercise and diet.

So physicians everywhere, in treating obesity, now feed a certain gland food. They combat the cause. The results are amazing, and they come in the right way.

A famous medical laboratory embodies that method in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 22 years—millions of boxes of them. All can see the results on every hand. Excess fat is far less common than twenty years ago.

The Marmola prescription is not secret. The formula is stated in every box. All the good results are explained. So users know why the flesh reduction brings such extra health and vigor.

No abnormal exercise or diet. Simply take four tablets daily until you reach the weight desired. Then you will know that the cause is corrected. An abnormal condition has been changed.

Try Marmola. It has served so many for so long that you owe this to yourself. Watch the new youth and beauty as it comes, the new health and vigor. Then tell your friends. Go start today.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 a box. Any druggist who is out will gladly order for you.

Orchestra Benefit Part Draws Liberal Patronag

AMONG the attractive mid-winter social affairs of the season was the dessert bridge given by a group of social women as a benefit for the Marion Civic orchestra at the Elks club, South State st., Saturday afternoon. The funds from the party will go toward buying music and paying small expenses of the orchestra.

Forty tables were filled for cards and table prizes were distributed by Miss Berry Mann. Mrs. Harold K. Mouser was general chairman of the arrangement committee. Covers for the individual tables were in pastel shades and the bridge prizes corresponded with the table appointments.

During the party the Civic orchestra played two groups of sections and Miss Madeline Dunlap, soprano, of Bucyrus, entertained with several vocal numbers. At 4 o'clock a buffet luncheon was served by Mrs. William Hickman and Mrs. J. F. Prendergast from a large table covered with a lace coverlet and centered with yellow calangulas and tapers.

Committees for the party were as follows: refreshments, Mrs. J. Gardner, Mrs. Carl W. Sawyer, J. F. Prendergast, Mrs. J. T. Reese, and Mrs. William Hickman; bridge appointments, Mrs. Ray Schell and Mrs. Harry Mauter; prizes, Mrs. George Kleinmaier, Mrs. Ernst Carl; tickets, Miss Gorham and Mrs. James C. Wise.

The blanket tighter than ever about him, John Andrew paraded down the corridor, down two flights of narrow stairs and to the telephone.

He paused before taking the receiver from the hook and looked grimly at the coin in his hand. There were a dozen fellows who would come with the money at once, but he could not be positive any of them would be in to answer to his call. He must not call the Asiatic Import; he was in trouble enough with his chief, Saunders, as it was, and especially so when Saunders found out that he was still in New York. That was out. There was Barbara, of course, who might be at home, but he sighed again as he thought of making explanations, and she was probably out anyhow.

There was no other positive thing to do; he dropped the coin and gave the number, much as if exposing his chest to a knife.

"Mr. Craig," he said. "Mr. Kellogg." He waited. At last, "Hello, Mr. Craig. This is John Andrew. No, I'm not in Utica . . . it's quite a story; too long to tell now, and . . . what? no; I haven't told them at the office yet, but I will . . . what . . . yes, I'm going there just as soon as . . . I can't right this minute, because striped pajamas are only done at European bathing beaches . . . no, sir, I'm not drunk . . . that's what I'm trying to tell you, sir; please send some one down here with a hundred . . . C, just in back for room rent . . . wait a minute . . ."

To the landlady: "Where am I?"

And, after telling Craig, "I took this one right between the eyes," John Andrew said. "It happened like this, if you must know . . . what?"

There was a long silence; John Andrew did nothing save listen, until he said levelly, "I see. Yes, sir, I'll come in as soon as I can. Good-by."

"What'd he say?"

John Andrew told her wearily, one hand to his head, "Very much, indeed."

"Changed his mind about sending you the money, didn't he?"

"I almost wish he had. No; it'll be here in 10 or 15 minutes. He was . . . just getting value received for it. Now I'll get some clothes on if you think it's safe to let me. I promise not to climb out the window."

He turned and then pulled the blanket as high as he could, unaware of exposing his brilliantly clad legs the more.

He had not heard any one come down the stairs. His face was as red as the stripes of his pajamas, although he tried valiantly to appear serene.

Even his first terrified glance told him that she was a very pretty girl.

"Good morning," John Andrew said.

Why on earth had he said that—or anything? What difference did it make that a girl—even a pretty girl—had slipped up on him, to stand looking as if he were one of the apes in the zoo? In a few minutes more he'd be out of this confounded boarding house, and . . .

"Good morning," the girl said frostily. "Is the telephone free."

"All you need," John Andrew informed her earnestly, "is a nickel. And the lady here will gladly lend you one, as she did me——"

"So I heard," the girl said.

John Andrew tried to glare at her. She was dressed all in dark blue—grateful to his eyes—with a tight little hat which was blue. Her eyes were at once cool and excited and shone frankly; John Andrew supposed that it was this obvious happiness—he realized that it assuredly did not concern him—which had made him speak.

"You shouldn't judge by first appearances," John Andrew said seriously.

"I know you're the Prince of Wales," the girl snapped. "Nobody else would dare wear such . . . such . . ."

"Say it," John Andrew grinned. He looked down and saw an expanse of scarlet and lilac; he flushed, but stood his ground.

"I really want to use the phone," she said.

Dignity spread over John Andrew's face. "Sorry," he said quietly. "I was just trying to . . . er . . . laugh matters off."

He turned abruptly and marched up the stairs.

It was only fair that he caught a word or two of what the girl said after the way she'd listened to what the landlady had told him, John Andrew decided, as he dressed slowly.

When John Andrew had finished dressing he looked into the mirror above the chiffonier, and wished again that he had his bag, that he might shave. He remembered now, all too clearly, what the girl had temporarily made him forget: what Craig had said. Kellogg' face grew rather white. He had, he realized, been a fool, but who would have thought that a . . . well, not a friend exactly, but a fellow you'd known in college, and who was down in his luck, would play such a shabby trick as Jennings had?

He sat quietly in the room's one chair until Craig's messenger came; paid his bill, and grinned when the landlady said she's never seen anything like it.

"You mean the pajamas?" John Andrew asked.

"Them, too," the landlady agreed. The money in pocket, she could afford to be more friendly. "Even Anne said that she'd never seen hotter ones in her life——"

"Expert in 'em, is she?" Kellogg said hastily.

"I'm sorry Anne's leaving," the landlady said to him severely. "Anne's a good girl; she' lived with me six months, and never once forgot . . ."

Kellogg remembered the word or so that had drifted up to him when the girl had telephoned. "I wish her luck," he said. "She'll need it in Hollywood."

"She'll get there. Anne don't need luck. She can take care of herself . . . how she laughed when you were out of sight!"

John Andrew said darkly, "Did she? I don't blame her." Nevertheless, he did; it came to him vividly what sort of a figure he must have seemed. "You tell Anne that if she doesn't need luck, I do . . ."

In the sunlight he forced himself to forget the girl who had made his head ache less; he ran a hand over his chin, and then determined to look more presentable before he tackled the office and Saunders. He swung blithely around an "el" pillar at the third crosstown street, and walked a half block to the nearest hotel.

He stopped at the flower stand, and, glancing at his tie, bought three cornflowers, leaning over the counter while the girl thrust them through his buttonhole. Blue . . . like Anne's dress. He wondered if her eyes had been blue also, but decided that they were brown; wondered if also if she had changed his luck. . . .

Passing the hotel desk, a clerk at the cashier's window called to him softly: "Mr. Kellogg! You were here last evening with a friend. Your friend, I regret to inform you, cashed a check with us——"

"How much?" John Andrew asked.

"It just came back from the bank, sir; the same bank we use. Fifty dollars."

A voice whispered to John Andrew, "Come on, laddie; be tough. Tell him to go chase himself, that Jennings isn't any more a friend than that porter with an armful of bags . . ." but John Andrew reached for his pocketbook, saying, "Sorry."

He saw almost $400 still to his credit.

"I couldn't include this with your bill at the end of the month, sir; things of this sort . . . unfortunate . . . didn't know how you would feel about it. . . ."

"I feel like hell about it, if you must know," Kellogg said. "Hardly the end of a perfect day."

"You . . . you seemed to be having an excellent time while you were here last night, sir."

"Um," John Andrew said. "Well, I'm glad to hear it."

Outside, the noise stirred him, as it always did. His nostrils moved as the combined odor of gasoline and perfume from the open hotel door reached him—a strange, singularly New York smell, into which the fumes of tobacco were seethed. John Andrew felt like walking through Central park, and kicking fallen leaves just to hear the crackle they made; like feeding bright eyed squirrels; like buying bags of chestnuts and . . . why Utica?

Who cared about Utica anyhow?

He must remember not to grin when Saunders talked about organization and duty and loyalty; he must make believe that failing to go to Utica was the worst thing which had happened to any one between the Battery and the Bronx in seven years.

As John Andrew stopped a cab, and climbed inside, he decided, as he had many times before, that it was rather a foolish notion of his father to have insisted that he be "steadily employed until reaching the age of 25 where he is not known as my son," or dire things would happen. Just what these were he did not know, and Craig undoubtedly tried to frighten him with what would turn out to be a bogey man. Lawyers were that way. Secrecy about nothing. Full of dust and mumbo-jumbo. Andrew Kellogg Sr., would never have been the man to leave his money to other than his own—which was John Andrew.

While his father had been living, the summer Kellogg had always had fun out of things which the older man smiled at; why, then, impose conditions? Such as . . . Utica! Not that John Andrew minded working, but there were so many other things to do, the men he knew all had time to do them in. So far as that went, did Barbara, although she was always lecturing him . . .

It had been Barbara, despite her constant advice, who had made him stay in New York when he should have gone upstate last month, although, fairly, he realized that he had not been hard to persuade.

He began to grin as he thought of relating the Jennings performance; he braced himself as the cab stopped abruptly, and lit a cigaret, wishing that he had paused at the hotel for coffee and rolls; of course he wouldn't mention the fellow's name, even if Jennings had turned out to be a pup: "There I stood with the nickel in my hand," he'd say, possibly to some of the men at dinner, "and if that nickel hadn't sure me action, I'd been out in the street with the kids wondering how I got loose from a barking beauty parade."

Telling about Anne wouldn't help the story any; he felt that some one would promptly say, "Well, did you date her?" and then he'd get angry. He knew that he would, although he saw no reason why he should. He said aloud, "I'm the simple minded Kellogg."

As he stepped from the cab on lower Broadway, he decided that the boutonniere was too festive for business, and dropped it to the street. It fell into a puddle of oil, and John Andrew looked at it a moment, glumly. Then, his face serious, he marched into the building.

A half hour later, when he was in the street again, it was no trouble at all to look sober. John Andrew's face was pale, although his ears were still lined with color; Utica, he worked with his fi... had discovered, was even more important than he had imagined Saunders would think it. John Andrew didn't have any job at all.

What he did next brought a messenger boy, a broker, several bond clerks, two insurance adjusters, a junior accountant and a corporation attorney to watch him. He bent over the curb, found three crushed cornflowers brown with oil, wiped them with his handkerchief, and then rearranged them in his buttonhole, apparently unaware of his swiftly forming audience.

One of the interested witnesses said to another, "Cornflowers. They're the emblem of the kaiser. National flower. Fellow has probably been cuckoo ever since the war. Doesn't look like a German, does he?"

John Andrew said clearly, "I'm Scotch."

Some one tittered. John Andrew grinned as he walked rapidly up Broadway.

* * *

It had been David Craig, 20 years earlier, who took John Andrew from the train in New York, examined him carefully, and then told the five-year-old boy gruffly that his face needed washing. Had Craig said what he was thinking—"You're a brave laddie to come so far by yourself"—the boy would have clung to his hand, instead of permitting it to be held in the great paw of the man.

John Andrew had indeed come a long way.

Coles rocking down the Kanawha river had awakened him, a month before; his father, undressing, sat beside the quilts on which the boy had slept. John Andrew had been carried by Kellogg himself to a sampan, where a bare-legged boatman sculled him through the confused border of fishing craft and into midstream, there to wait for the steamer.

While they waited, in some low roofed concealed temple a Shinto priest's voice began to chant loudly, almost fiercely; it sounded fanatical and defiant, but tremendously believing; it seemed to affect the older Kellogg for he passed his arm about the thin little body of John Andrew.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

EVERYONE was scrunched up and shiverish yesterday morning, which was Sunday, because it had turned coldish again. I let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth and went downstairs and carried out saber and fixed fires and stood by them till the stoves got red hot and then I noticed that my clothes which my mother washed last night had not got over my putting fertilizer in bars for the men at the stink factory. When they got good and hot they smelt like Aunt Miles whose father works at the stink factory and has his clothes made over for Aunt when he has worn them out. Then I was so warm I went out without my coat buttoned to milk the cow, and almost froze before I had got to the barn with Jubilee. Nibs and String and the Lost Bag of Tripe was there already. Nibs has still got the underclothes he got with the money the lady gave his grandmother for stealing Jubilee, so he don't mind getting out early, and the others not out because they are always afraid the bunch will do something and they won't be there.

By the time I got the dummed brutes milked the bunch was all there, and my mother told me to bring them in the kitchen to get warm while I et and get washed for Sunday school, so I did, and while we were eating they all got around the kitchen stove, and my mother didn't know t... When the girls came, and Feeble came in from the kitchen and said, something must of crawled under our house and died, and a whiff of the kitchen came in the dining room with berries my father laid down his knife and fork and my ant gulped a couple of times and made a run for her room. My mother went and chased the bunch outdoors and burnt some coffee on the stove, and they all left nearly all their breakfast for me, and my ant hollered out of her room that I would have to wash myself, so I was lucky after all.

At Sunday school when we all got around the stove all the teachers began to sniff, and the super coughed a couple of times and then said there would not be any Sunday school and we might go home. When we left we had the windows open and the ladies were waving their coats to get the air changed in time for church. We went to town and looked at the valentines in the store windows. A stink factory is a good thing to have around.

Nothing happened today, which was Monday, except our teacher told us we reminded her of a rose garden, we were so different. After school I got the bunch if they had ever seen a rain pipe ... weather, and ... burned ... [illegible]

'The Secret Trail'

A Fascinating Mystery Story

SCOTLAND YARD GOES OUT AFTER ITS MAN

BY ANTHONY ARMSTRONG

CHAPTER 29

SAFE at last in an obscure hotel near the Place Blanche, Hyslop and Jimmie discussed plans.

"There's a 10 o'clock train leaves now, reaching London at 6:15," announced Hyslop from a timetable. "I think that'll be ours. I'm all for getting out of this gay city."

"I wish," said Jimmie, who had been lost in thought for some while, "we could have collared Viloff."

"Can't, unless we get him back to England. And that's practically impossible, unless he comes of his own free will. Which he won't."

"I wonder," said Jimmie. "You know, we've got a good bait to tempt him in this fighter. I certainly don't think he's given up heart yet. In fact, I wouldn't mind betting he'll have us trailed at all stations tomorrow." He paused, then added with deliberation: "H. H., I'm going to assume we shall see more of him and lay plans accordingly. I'm going to get that blighter. * * *"

They talked a little more and then went to bed.

Two Suit Cases

Jimmie was up early the next day in furtherance of his new scheme. He went out into the Boulevard Clichy and made several purchases, including two cheap suit cases, with which he returned to the hotel. On his journey he had a feeling that he had been followed, and verified it a moment later from a window.

"They're onto us," he remarked to Hyslop. "What a wonder Viloff isn't * * * I believe he'd trail a soul into hell * * * What's the time? Nine? Right! Well, I'm going to start the ball rolling. You know where to meet me?"

"Nine-fifty-nine at the Nord station for the 10 o'clock train. With my little bag?"

"Mind you, don't put anything valuable inside," grinned Jimmie. "I'm betting you don't get on the train with it."

"Bet you a level bob I do. Unless I'm scuppered."

"I'll take you. You've got a lot to learn before you're up to No. 1's standard—or mine! Well, I'm off. So long!"

"Good luck!"

Jimmie sent a man out to fetch a taxi and bring it to the hotel. Into this he put one of the suitcases—Hyslop had the other—and a large brown-paper parcel. Then he ordered the driver to go to St. Lazare station. Out of the corner of his eye, he saw a well-dressed man, apparently idling near by, hail another taxi and follow.

Halfway to St. Lazare, Jimmie cried to his driver: "I meant the Gare du Nord. And as quick as hell! Fifty francs."

The driver went round a side turning on two wheels and was off at 50 francs' worth of high speed. For the second time in 24 hours, Jimmie found himself racing to the Nord station.

Looking back through the window, he saw that he had not thrown the other taxi off, though he had gained an enormous lead by his manoeuvre. He did not, however, worry; for he had allowed for that.

His Baggage Checked

He whirled up to the Nord, paid his man and was inside like a flash. At the first baggage depository he came to he checked in his suitcase; then he hurried across to the far side of the station, and checked the brown-paper parcel into the other consigne. After this he retired to the waiting-room, ostensibly to wash his hands, but while in the cubicle he took the opportunity to place one of the baggage checks in the sock and the other in his pocketbook.

Finally he strolled out, mopping his forehead. About the first person he saw was the well-dressed stranger, who had followed him and who was now anxiously looking round, obviously worried at having lost his quarry.

His face brightened as he saw Jimmie, and he hurriedly turned away. Jimmie also turned away, to hide a smile, and then went to buy his ticket.

Later, Jimmie Sexton sauntered out of the station. He was in no great hurry. He was allowing the spy to make his own deductions as to what had happened when a man arrived at a station with luggage and then came out without it. He looked at his watch. Nine-thirty; he still had half an hour.

For a moment he paused outside lighting a cigaret; then suddenly he hailed a taxi and jumped in, directing the driver to go quickly to St. Lazare station. To leave his inquisitive follower behind at the Nord was perhaps a bit risky he knew, but he was relying on the officialdom of the French consigne authorities not to give away anything, even information. He was pleased, however, to note that the other had not considered this opportunity, for he also jumped in a taxi and followed behind.

Jimmie soon corrected the order to go to St. Lazare station, and instead drove round the Grand boulevards. At the end he gave his discreet watcher a great shock by going down the Rue de Richelieu and stopping, out of sheer devilry, at the Hotel Metz, as if about to get out, before telling his man to go back to the Gare du Nord.

A Bold Hold-up

He had judged it all well and arrived at 5 minutes to 10. He had barely got inside the thronged and echoing station, before a man jostled him as he passed on angle of wall.

A second man was instantly at his side, and before he had realized what had happened he had been backed up into the half-hidden angle with the two men facing him as if in friendly conversation.

But this was no friendly conversation, for one of the men was Viloff, and the other held concealed a knife, the point of which Jimmie felt at his ribs.

"Your pocketbook, quick!" snapped Viloff, his deepset eyes blazing, "and look as if you were doing it in the ordinary course of a talk."

Jimmie, amazed beyond belief at the audacity of the attack, reluctantly drew out his pocketbook and handed it over without a word.

With a smile of triumph, the other opened it and abstracted the baggage check of the consigne.

"Thank you," he said mockingly.

"You've won at the last, then," snarled Jimmie.

"I'm afraid so. But there's no time to kill you here. Besides, I honestly think it would be a pity. You're a worthy opponent—really you've made me stretch myself. But don't cross my road again. You can go to England now, and bon voyage!"

Jimmie, released, hurried through the barrier onto the platform and went up the far end of the train. With a quick glance behind him, he hailed a porter and, drawing from inside his sock the other cloakroom check, handed it to the man.

"Bring me my suitcase at once before the train goes, and there's 20 francs for you."

"Bien, monsieur." The man was off at a run.

A minute or so later, as the whistle blew, the porter arrived breathlessly and thrust the suitcase at Jimmie, leaning out of his window. As Beraire handed over the note, he again looked swiftly round and saw that, as he anticipated, no one had followed or noticed the man, an ordinary blue-blouse porter among many. His ruse had come off.

Bird Cage for No. 1

Ten minutes later, while the train clanked across the northern suburbs of Paris, Hyslop dropped wearily into the seat beside him and whispered:

"You win the bob. I got it a scrimmage at the barrier and lost my bag. How the hell it went, I don't know. I hadn't time to do anything except grab at his train."

"Hard lines," smiled Jimmie. "I've got mine, but in spite of all my trouble they've got the parcel I left at the consigne."

Hyslop grinned back at him. "It worked, then?"

"Yes, I wonder what Viloff will say when he unwraps a bird cage with a nice heavy brick in it!"

"And," he added reminiscently, leaning back luxuriously in his seat, "there was a note tied on to it as well, 'One to do Paradis pour rats,' I think it read."

Urging Him On

After half an hour or so, Jimmie got up and beckoned Hyslop into the corridor.

"Keep an eye on my case," he murmured. "I'm just going down the train to see whether Viloff has got on board after all."

"Good Lord, do you think he has? I was thinking this would finish him."

"I don't, though it probably took him too long to find out he'd been done, there's just a chance. But I'm going to make certain. Nothing must slip now."

"I hope to the devil he hasn't," Hyslop looked worried.

"I hope to the devil he has," grinned Jimmie surprisingly.

"Golly! You aren't half asking for it, old lover."

"It'll mean something more to me than the mere money I'll get if I can land old Viloff safe in an English prison. In fact, that's what I'm playing for," he added as he started along the swaying train.

"Not a soul," he announced to his waiting companion. "But I shouldn't be surprised if we see him at Calais yet. A fast car could do it."

"I wonder just what his little game will be in that case," murmured Hyslop.

"Whatever it is, I wonder if mine won't be better," retorted Jimmie.

Love's Reawakening

The Story of a Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

BY ADELE GARRISON

Harry Underwood Declines to Open the Mysterious Express Package

HOW much did Harry Underwood know of the chapter in Lillian's life which had Robert Savarin for its heading? This was the query which ran like an undercurrent through the memories which had come thronging upon me as I read the famous artist's name upon the express receipt, as the shipper of the wooden box to Lillian.

That he knew enough to cherish a most lively jealousy of the artist I was sure, for I had once seen his contorted face when he spoke of Marion's affection for Savarin as contrasted with her aversion to himself. That aversion was now happily transformed into genuine liking, but I was sure even that welcome knowledge had not changed Mr. Underwood's feeling toward the man who had given Lillian a wonderful devotion in the years of his own expatriation.

There had been too many years of callous neglect upon the husband's part, of bitter resentment upon the wife's to make shock perfect their reunion, even though Harry Underwood had royally expiated that neglect in the government rock, which nearly cost him the life which he had laid at her feet with the plea, "Will it do, Lil?" That both were now real lovers, I knew, but I also suspected Harry Underwood's jealousy born of that belated love, and I feared the reaction which Lillian's pride—and memories—might present to any exhibition of resentment upon her husband's part.

My memories and fears had covered a dozen years and more of life, yet there was but the space of a second or two between my taking of the express receipt into my hand and Lillian's reaching out for it.

Harry's Refusal

"Let me see it, Madge," she said quietly, and there was no change whatever in her face as she read it. When she had finished, she looked over at her husband.

"Will you see that the box is opened, please, Harry?" she made the request as casually as though the big case had not been the means of which I had talked. But—was it my imagination, or was [illegible]

"My dear," he said, and only one who knew him intimately could detect the irony and refined anger in his voice—"I am sure you would much prefer having such impersonal companionship as Jim's when this interesting box is opened. With your kind permission I'll send him in to you at once."

He bent from the waist in another bow, straightened himself, wheeled with a touch of military precision and strode out of the door. From the corner of my eye I saw Lillian stretch out her hand to him and then draw it back so quickly that I knew the first movement had been an involuntary one. But her husband's eyes had been carefully averted from her, and I knew he had not seen the placatory little movement.

But I had seen her eyes, and as the door closed behind him I took her by the arm and marched her into the nearest room, the library, and put her into an easy chair.

Noël Coward, Yet!

"Shut your eyes and pull yourself together," I commanded. "Would you like to have me dress Jim's opening of that box?"

She looked up at me gratefully.

"If you only would," she breathed; then, as I nodded, she gripped my hand and threw up her head.

"No, thank-you," she said, explosively. "I'm not quite a coward yet. But this is so unexpected that it has unnerved me. I thought that chapter was closed—forever. What do you suppose Robert means by this?"

I hesitated, then put a direct question.

"Does Robert know that you and Harry are reconciled?"

"I don't know," she said, after a troubled little pause. "Everything was finally settled between us when he went to Europe the last time. Robert understood us just—after a fashion. I never [illegible] to see him again, or write to him. It was terrible—hard—for me—how hard possibly will you know?—but his own attitude toward my work and Marion—though he tried her dearly—made it impossible for me to tolerate other conditions.

There were little beads of sweat upon her forehead now, and I realized that she was [illegible]

"I know that," she said, "but I've

Microbe Incubator Holds Enough Deadly Germs To Wipe Out Population of U. S.

DETROIT, Feb. 10—The world's largest germ incubator contains enough deadly microbes to wipe out the population of the United States, according to the officials of the Parke-Davis laboratories.

Eighteen cabinets, each with a capacity of 420 quarts of germ toxin, comprise the incubator of the laboratories which is used to grow bacteria in order to make substances that will safeguard man against the very diseases for which these microbes are responsible.

During the growing and reproduction processes, bacteria eliminate substances which are used in the preparation of specific preventative and curative agents.

Germs Very Particular

"The germs are very particular about their diet," says Dr. W. E. King, assistant director of the laboratories. "They must have just so much salt, peptone, glucose, (sugars) and glycerine, and these must be in exactly the proper proportions to suit the individual taste of each kind of germ. Even the acidity of the culture medium must be most carefully adjusted and the temperature and humidity of the incubator kept constant."

Hundreds of quarts of diphtheria toxin, or poison, are produced every week in this incubator, King declared. This is used to immunize horses in the production of diphtheria antitoxin, from which is made the diphtheria toxin-anti-toxin that is used to safeguard children against this disease. It is estimated that about 1,000 quarts of diphtheria toxin, if properly administered, would kill 2,000,000 persons.

The incubator has thousands of bottles of tubercle culture, which is used to make tuberculin. This substance is employed mostly in diagnosing tuberculosis. There are, roughly estimating, 75,000,000,000,000 (75 trillion) tubercle germs in each bottle.

Some 20 different kinds of disease germs are grown in the incubator, including those which cause typhoid, pneumonia, bacillary dysentary, boils, scarlet fever, erysipelas and whooping cough. There are 10 to 25 different strains representing each kind of germ.

Microbes Are Captive

"If the incubator were given over entirely to the production of diphtheria toxin, enough would be produced in a week to kill 144,000,000 persons—which is more than the combined population of the United States, Canada, Mexico and Argentina," Dr. King said. "But these particular germs have been harnessed to cure man and to prevent him from acquiring diseases. They are so controlled that they cannot kill him.

"The germs, are, in fact, captives, as safe as convicts in a prison and as closely under guard. Even if a bottle containing the deadly microbes and their poisons were to drop on the floor and break, no harm would be done because a powerful solution would be poured immediately over the spilled contents, killing every germ, and thus removing the danger of infection of the laboratory worker."

ARRESTS OPEN WAY FOR DRUGS DRIVE

Alleged Addicts Taken in Cincinnati; 22 Arrested in Toledo

CINCINNATI, Feb. 10—An extensive campaign against narcotic dealers and addicts, of one of the most notorious drug rings in the middle west, was launched here today following the arrest of Henry Sewell, 51, timber investor and buyer of Richmond, Ind., and Pauline Wilson, alias Henrietta Fowler, 30, alleged drug addicts.

Sewell, who was arraigned before United States Commissioner August Hoffman on a charge of having narcotics, is said to have deposited that he spent more than $32,000 of his savings, for narcotics in the past three years.

The pair was jointly arraigned and bond was set for Feb. 28. Bail was fixed that their bond be $5,000 each, because there was a possibility to obtain freedom they could receive treatment and be restrained from further use of drugs.

Federal narcotic agents, druggists and physicians in Dayton, Hamilton and Cincinnati are expected to be made within a few days. Sewell is alleged to have purchased from one Dayton physician prescriptions which amounted to more than $8,000 within the past year.

22 Arrested in Toledo Drug Raids

TOLEDO, Feb. 10—Twenty-two men and women are being held by federal authorities here today, following one of the largest drug cleanups that has been staged in Toledo in the past five years. Drugs, valued at more than $5,000 were also seized by the federal agents.

The ring, which is believed to be one of the largest in the Middle West, with international connections, has been broken up, according to Maurice Hebeart, government agent, under whose direction the raid was made.

Hebeart, who has been in charge of the Toledo narcotic area since Jan. 1, said that John Mitchell, alias Fox, proved to be the leader of the ring and the principal source of the local drug supply, was one of those who were arrested. Mitchell's wife, Johnnie Mae Mitchell, also was arrested.

The raid and the wholesale arrests are as the result of an extensive investigation which has been under way here for more than a month.

Chapman family, about 5 o'clock this morning. The fire, which was caused by a defective stovepipe, was discovered yesterday afternoon and was thought to have been extinguished by members of the family.

Members of the Prospect volunteer fire department responded to the call this morning. The furniture was saved.

TO THOSE who have known the disappointment of mileage guarantees that mean running on smooth rubber a great part of the way, the DUAL-Balloon brings an entirely new experience—season-after-season of non-skid security—the greatest ever known.

With rubber prices rising and tires still priced on the old cost basis, why take chances of running on "bald-headed" tires.

OBTAIN $4,200 LOOT IN COLUMBUS SAFE

Furniture Store Victim of Safe-Cracking "Epidemic" in Capital City

COLUMBUS, Feb. 10—Although police have doubled their efforts to capture safe-crackers, who have been operating on downtown stores and factories for the past several weeks, the burglars had continued their activities today, apparently unhampered.

Loot of $4,200 was obtained by cracksmen early Sunday from the strongbox of the Glick Furniture Co. in the heart of the business district here.

The robbery was reported yesterday, and detectives who investigated, believe that the same persons are responsible for a number of similar furniture store robberies which have occurred within the past month.

Colder Tonight, Warmer Tuesday, Is Forecast

Slightly colder weather tonight with increasing cloudiness and warmer weather Tuesday is the official forecast today.

Last night a temperature of 26 degrees was driven into every corner of the city by strong winds, which lasted throughout the night and slightly abated this morning. A light snowfall was also noticed here this morning.

The low mark of 26 last night followed a drop of 17 degrees yesterday. A year ago the city was in the grip of more extreme temperatures with the mercury ranging between a high of 28 degrees and a low of zero.

M'Carty, Kauffman To Share Limelight With Reynolds Tuesday

JACK REYNOLDS

WITH the semi-final bringing together men known in the Marion ring as mat tenderers, Tuesday night's wrestling card at the Steam Shovel gym offers two feature attractions.

The first will be the windup battle between Jack Reynolds, the welterweight champion, and Basanta Singh, the Hindu. It will be Marion's first chance to see a champion in action. Reynolds is the outstanding welter of the country and has proven everything that has come his way in his weight class. At the request of the National Boxing association he will defend his title against Charles "Gorilla" Gray sometime within the near future. The winner of this go will have the official recognition of the N. B. A. as the welterweight title holder of the world.

Reynolds is being brought to Marion as a sustitute for John Peak. Peak was forced to cancel all his mat bookings owing to the serious illness of his mother. According to information received here today, his mother died Saturday afternoon from blood poisoning. From indications Peak will return to the ring within the next several weeks. Efforts will then be made to rebook him here.

Reynolds, however, is not the usual type of substitute. He is as capable of filling a main-go bill as Peak himself. In some localities he is even a better drawing card. His Hindu opponent ranks as one of the best wrestlers from the far east.

The match promises to be one of the cleanest and most scientific offered to Marion fans by Promoter Caswell this season. Reynolds is noted for his fast work on the mat.

Plenty of action is promised in the semi-final when Irish Pat McCarty squares off with Clete Kauffman. Neither wrestler has appeared in Marion for several weeks. Kauffman was defeated by "Gentle" John Kilonis and McCarty was beaten by Pinkie Gardner in their last bouts.

Both men will be out to [illegible] any prestige that they [illegible] through those defeats. McC[illegible] is a striking figure in the r[illegible] and is able to give fans plenty [illegible] excitement. Kauffman's work [illegible] exceptionally clean. Both boys [illegible] light heavyweights.

A 10-minute preliminary completes the bill.

VERNON PLAYS FAST BALL TO WIN BATTLE

Defeats John Simpson, of Mansfield, 34 to 11, To Avenge Defeat

Unleashing its fastest scoring attack of the season, the Vernon Heights Junior cagers Saturday night avenged one of the two defeats handed them this season when they defeated the John Simpson Juniors of Mansfield, 31 to 11.

The contest found Vestal, Uhl and Guthrie taking the lead in scoring, each man counting eight baskets. John Simpson was led by Keifer with four points.

The game was Marion's all the way through and Mansfield never threatened the Vernon lead. After the first few minutes of play the locals solved the Mansfield defense and then drove on to a one-sided victory.

In the preliminary Vernon defeated Central, 22 to 11, in a battle between the Torch clubs of the two schools.

ZANESVILLE BEATS PRESIDENTS, 27-12

Red and Black Scores Eight Points in First Quarter with Second Stringers in Lineup

AFTER scoring eight points in the first quarter, the Harding basketeers took a vacation during the remainder of the game and were defeated by Zanesville in Star auditorium Saturday night, 27 to 12.

A six-point lead at the end of the first quarter lasted until the second half when Zanesville went to the front 10 to 8 after holding the Red and Black scoreless in the second frame.

Coach Compton used most of his second stringers leaving Castner, Ruzzo and Bush on the bench. Merkel and Klingel were the only regulars in the lineup. Morgan played a forward, Smith the center and Clay started at guard opposite Klingel. It wasn't a bad starting combination, at that, for the five men fought like wildcats for the first quarter. They weakened in the second period and Zanesville went into the lead.

In the second half the regulars received their chance. Before the third period was over, Castner, Bush and Ruzzo were striving to break up the long string of defeats that have followed the Presidents throughout the season.

In the third quarter Zanesville marked up a total of eight points while holding Harding to two free throws. The score as the game entered the final period was 20 to 10.

Bush scored a basket for Harding's only counter of the final session. Zanesville got two baskets and three free throws.

Singer, Zanesville's husky star, stood out for the visitors with a total of eight points. Smith, playing forward for Zanesville, marked up six.

Merkel scored five of Harding's markers.

The lineups:

Harding	G.	F.	Zanesville	G.	F.
Morgan, f	0	0	Tanner, f	1	1
Bush, f	1	0	Smith, c	2	2

PERFECT RECORD IS RETAINED BY PURDUE

Boilermakers Defeat Chicago; Illinois Jolted by Minnesota Quintet

CHICAGO, Feb. 10—Purdue, Wisconsin and Michigan still hold the three best places in the Western conference basketball loop today although the conference guns resumed booming in earnest Saturday night after a two weeks examination period recess.

Purdue added another victory to its perfect score Saturday night when the boilermaker squad proved its right to first place in the Big Ten by defeating Chicago, 37 to 25.

Illinois, pinning its last hopes for a share in the Big Ten title on a victory over Northwestern tonight, is still smarting from the jolt Minnesota dealt out Saturday night when the Northern defeated the Illini, 26 to 21.

Both Illinois and Northwestern have been beaten twice and the losing team tonight can begin laying plans for next season.

Wednesday night Northwestern meets Indiana at the former's home floor. Saturday night Northwestern meets Wisconsin in an attempt to jar the Badgers from second place with another defeat. Indiana at present holds a 36 to 22 victory over Northwestern and Northwestern in turn is the only team thus far to wallop Wisconsin.

Knute Hansen After Beating Phil Scott Two Years Ago Now Ranks as 3rd Rater

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, Feb. 10—It was only two years ago that Knute Hansen reached down below his shoetops and knocked Philip Scott into the third row balcony in the first two minutes of play, apparently discontinuing Philip for the duration of time itself. But manythings can happen in two years and so today we are afforded the deadly parallel of Philip fighting in Miami this month for about $75,000 and the right to challenge for the heavyweight championship, whereas tonight Hansen is fighting Ted Sandwina on the ten-twenty-thirty time at the St. Nicholas club here for a dollar-ninety and the right to eat.

Park ay. will beam on Philip when he steps into the ring at Miami on the twenty-eighth. White shirt fronts will gleam starkly in the night and diamond stomachers will be on every hand, as the fellow said. At the St. Nicholas club, which has a ceiling so low that you take off your hat in order to avoid the cobwebs, Third av. usually has a swell time throwing erstwhile vegetables at the fighters. Its marksmanship ought to be superb tonight. This Sandwina fellow can't fight, which makes the thing perfect. As a usual thing, Hansen can fight, but won't.

What has happened in the meantime to bring about a change so tremendous in the careers of the man who was knocked and the man who knocked him? In the case of Philip, it has been largely a matter of masterly inaction. Having been knocked, he decided to do nothing that would get him knocked again. In other words, he decided to stand on his record, which he found to be far simpler than standing on his feet. So he has done nothing at all very constantly and now the best people seek him out in the hope that he will accept them as an equal.

There should be a lesson in this to men like Hansen who can't be made to realize that, in this thing called life, the less you do, the better they like you. Anyhow, he went around fighting all the humpty dumpties he could find, and, the first thing you knew, one of them had a great fall, only that was all right because the thing he fell on was Hansen. He, the humpty dumpty, fell on Hansen with a right hand to the jaw and overnight he was famous. His name was Knute Christner.

The punch ran Hansen out of $100,000 worth of matches and he since has put in much of his time wondering whether, by the time summer comes, he will be able to afford an overcoat. For, in spite of his experience, the man kept over-marching himself, one of his losing fights being made with Cupid, the little guy with the poison darts who never loses. Hanson has lived abroad much of the time since the Christner disaster.

He finally returned to America some months ago and found that it had forgotten him in a very marked manner. The Madison Square Garden people, under whose auspices he had wafted Philip into the subconscious, were too busy to have Hanson properly thrown out when he called. They were too busy seeing that Philip got his $75,000 and his ten with lemon. Somebody, for instance, suggested than Hanson be sent in with Gempolo when the boxing commission wouldn't stand for Johnny Risko. The Garden, however, threw Hanson and the idea out so hard that neither of them bounced, which of course is highly improper. Hanson, in fact, has earned the right to demand a rebounce. He practically is entitled to this as a matter of courtesy.

In the meantime, the man must eat and so he is fighting a third rate fighter at a third rate club, where third av. spends its evenings in its own restrained way.

Y-INDUS CAGERS WIN CLOSE CONTEST HERE

Columbus Central Y Five Defeated 19 to 15; Gillis Is Star

Columbus Central Y cagers Saturday night were the victims of another Marion Y-Indus victory. After a hard battle the capital city five was defeated by the Ramblers, 19 to 15.

Only once did Columbus hold the lead over the Marion team. That was in the first quarter when the count stood 3 to 2. The remainder of the game found the locals out in front. Marion never held a big lead and several times the score was tied as the Centralites made vain attempts to chalk up a victory.

Close defensive work by the Columbus team cut Gillis' scoring average. He led both teams with a total of eight counters. Jones scored six points for the visitors.

BISHOPS THREATEN LEAD OF BEARCAT

Teams Expected To Wind Up Season Tied for F[illegible] Place in Buckeye Conference Race

COLUMBUS, Feb. 10—History is likely to repeat itself in the Buckeye Athletic association basketball race, and Ohio Wesleyan and Cincinnati, it appears, will again be cochampions, as they were in 1920.

The Battling Bishops, playing their best cage game of the season, turned the trick Saturday night by defeating the fast Cincinnati five. They have only to down Ohio university and Miami this week to take the lead from the Bearcats. If they win their first game, Cincinnati and Wesleyan will again be tied for first place, and if the Bishops win their second contest, they will go into the lead, which is now held by Cincinnati.

The game with the Ohio Bobcats will be played at Delaware, and the Bishops are inspired to such a pitch that a Wesleyan victory seems the only outcome. Miami, which has won only one of its conference games, should be easy.

Cincinnati is idle this week, which makes it easier for the Bishops. They seem bound to take the lead, which will ultimately result, it is predicted, in a tie for the two teams.

Cincinnati, in its decisive 38-25 defeat at the hands of Ohio Wesleyan, keenly felt the loss of Bill Gervers, its star forward, who was declared ineligible Saturday because of failure to make the required grades in the mid-term examinations. Cincinnati has only two games on its conference card, Ohio university and Miami. They should win both of these and again share the title with Wesleyan.

Berwanger was also out of the game for Cincinnati in Saturday's tilt. He has an injured hip. This week's idleness will give Berwanger's injured member a chance to heal, and the Bearcats should be in the running again with the giant guard in action.

In the Ohio conference, the [illegible] less complicated. Wooster [illegible] firmer hold on the title by [illegible] its sixth victory Saturday from [illegible] lin. Kenyon and Akron are on [illegible] ule for the Woosterites this [illegible] they should hurdle both of [illegible] great shape.

Ohio Northern's Polar [illegible] scored the only upset of Sa[illegible] play by downing the fast[illegible] Muskingum outfit. Hiram won [illegible] Western Reserve and Mount [illegible] took a 59-to-26 win from Case.

Bluffton tied with Defiance [illegible] first place in the Northweste[illegible] league by downing Findlay, 35 [illegible] was the only conference game [illegible] week-end.

ANOTHER PAYLESS WEEK FOR CHICAGO

One More Trouble Added with Disclosure of Interest Bill of $8,500,000

CHICAGO, Feb. 10—Another payless week loomed today for 40,000 city, county and school board employes with no apparent relief in sight for Chicago's frenzied governmental finances.

Added to the previous financial troubles which threaten to bring bankruptcy was the announcement today of an interest bill of more than $8,500,000 on tax anticipation warrants outstanding since May 1, 1929, when 1928 taxes should have been collected.

Before these taxes are collected under the reassessment program and money is available with which to reduce the huge floating debts, the interest bill will have mounted to $12,000,000, it was disclosed.

Meanwhile negotiations to dispose of tax anticipation warrants to New York bankers have borne no fruit. The only prospective buyer is a syndicate headed by Herbert C. Heller, New York investment banker.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—Having spent a restful week-end, and showing added zest for nourishment, William Howard Taft's condition was better today than at any time since returning to the capital a week ago, from Asheville, N. C., after having resigned as chief justice of the United States supreme court.

The last reports issued by the former president and jurist were that he was taking added nourishment and was obtaining much rest, necessary for his fight against arterio sclerosis.

"Each cough made me more anxious . . . more frightened!"

"It was eleven o'clock on a bitter winter night—my little daughter Jane woke up—coughing. My husband ran to the drug store and got a bottle of Smith Brothers' Cough Syrup. With the very first swallow of the syrup her cough began to calm down. We gave her a little bit every hour and finally, around two o'clock in the morning, she fell asleep again. How relieved I was! In the morning Jane felt much better—and in two days she was all well again."

Kreisler-Jacobi Operetta Furnishes Songs for Noted American Baritone

Selections from "Apple Blossoms" Chosen for Monday Night Program

FOUR solos and a vocal interlude in excerpts from the Kreisler-Jacobi operetta "Apple Blossoms" will be sung by John Charles Thomas, noted American baritone, when he appears as guest artist of the General Motors program at 9:30 o'clock Monday night over the WEAF network. It will be his first appearance before the microphone in several months, as he has been devoting most of his time to concert work. In addition to the guest artist's solos a concert will be provided by the orchestra under the direction of Don Voorhees. Five numbers will be played.

The selections from "Apple Blossoms" are particularly suited to the program because Mr. Thomas was the star of the operetta when it was one of Broadway's great successes about 10 years ago. The orchestral numbers will open with the waltz "The Beautiful Blue Danube" by Johann Strauss, whose waltzes will always be famous.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyance which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and cleaning the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.—Adv.

SCENE AT UTAH MINE DISASTER

Twenty coal miners died from gas fumes that flooded the workings of mine No. 1 of the Standard Coal Co. at Standardville, Utah, following an explosion. Thirty men on a night shift were at work when the blast let go. According to coal company officials the explosion resulted from sparks from a mine cutting machine igniting the gas in the underground workings. Picture shows miners' bodies being transported from the underground workings to the town.

Fair To Have Special Day for County School Pupils

Children Will Be Guests of Management on Friday of Fair Week; Parade and Prizes Planned; Revenue from Concessions Increased

Marion county school children will be guests of the Marion County Agricultural society for one day of the annual fair this year, and in return will furnish an entirely new feature on the fair program, the executive committee of the fair board decided Saturday.

Hundreds of complimentary tickets made especially for school children will be distributed in all schools in the city and county to children who agree to participate in a parade that is to be one of the outstanding features of the Friday afternoon session of the fair.

New Feature Here

The parade, an entirely new feature here although common to many other county fairs, will not only directly interest the children in the annual fairs, but will also draw hundreds of parents from all corners of the county, Carl Sifrit, fair secretary, said today.

Prizes will be offered to the schools having the most attractive line of march, the highest percentage of attendance in the parade, and for a short stunt.

With the financial aspects of the agricultural society somewhat discouraging, and with future fairs depending on the success of the 1930 exposition, the fair board has been taking advantage of every opportunity to cut expenses and increase revenue. As a starter, nearly $500 more than was ever paid before has been demanded for concession rights, and this figure has been met.

Concession Fees Boosted

The board expects concessions to net nearly $2,300 this year, which lacks but a few dollars of being $500 more than last year.

Last of the concessions were sold Saturday when the executive committee awarded the lunch stand concession to the Green Camp church at its bid of $701.11. Last year the concession sold for $550.

Other concessions sold to date are: score cards, A. B. Curtis Wellington, $400; novelties, W. H. Davids, London, $65; rides, Jesse R. Edwards, Wooster, $300; games exclusive, W. S. Curl, London, $225; soft drinks, Charles Scheff, Quaker City, $900.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache, no hawking, snuffling, nasal discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.—Adv.

I DON'T UNDERSTAND THE MEANING OF THE $20,000.00 IN REAL MONEY THAT WAS SO MYSTERIOUSLY SENT TO ME LAST WEEK. TOOTS TWICE I FOUND ENVELOPES CONTAINING MONEY UNDER OUR FRONT DOOR - I FOUND $5000.00 IN BUTTERCUP'S GO-CART, AND ONE NIGHT WHEN I TURNED DOWN THE COVERS I FOUND A STACK OF BILLS ON MY BED! A TYPEWRITTEN NOTE ATTACHED, SIGNED, A FRIEND STATED I WOULD UNDERSTAND EVERYTHING IF THE WRITER SHOULD SOMEDAY REVEAL HIS IDENTITY. I WONDER WHO HE IS?
I WISH HE'D HURRY UP AND SAY WHO HE IS, CASPER IT'S ALL SO STRANGE IT ALMOST WORRIES ME!
WHO IS THAT GUY? I CAN'T PLACE HIM, YET THERE IS SOMETHING ABOUT HIM THAT SEEMS FAMILIAR TO ME! HE LOOKED STARTLED WHEN HE SAW ME - AT LEAST I IMAGINED HE DID!
JIMMY MURPHY
2-10.
CASPER ISN'T THE ONLY ONE WHO IS PUZZLED ABOUT THE MONEY THAT WAS SENT TO HIM! WE'RE ALL INTENSELY INTERESTED IN THIS STRANGE AFFAIR! WHAT IS THE MOTIVE BACK OF IT ALL?

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

To "Point-Up" Appetite Just Stimulate Bowels

Whenever the end of the day finds you out-of-sorts; food doesn't tempt you and won't digest; breath is bad; tongue coated, just chew a Cascaret tablet before bedtime. Tomorrow you'll be a new person!

A candy Cascaret cleans up a bilious, gassy, headachy condition every time. Puts appetite on edge. Helps digestion. Activates bowels.

Cascarets are made from cascara, which authorities say actually strengthens bowel muscles. So, take these delightful tablets as often as you please; or give them freely to children. All drug stores sell Cascarets for a dime, and no dollar preparation could do better work. —Adv.

CHANGE IN TEACHING METHODS IS URGED

Educator Says Vocational, Cultural Education Should Be Mixed

CHICAGO, Feb. 10—Parents who often despair because the youngsters seemingly can't remember about their lessons might try the following recipe given by Jane Addams, head of Hull house at Chicago and student and counselor of youth for many years. Take the ingredients and mix as follows:

Tie up the boy's study of Latin with chemistry or electricity and he'll remember his Latin; hook up correctness in grammar with correctness in clothes and a girl will remember her grammar. Miss Addams enlarged on her educational theory as follows:

Children Forget

"A recent extensive investigation in London showed how much a child forgets after he leaves school," she said. "It is really remarkable how entire subjects disappear from the child mind after school is over. It was found that the only things which he really remembered were those which his daily tasks required him to use. Those subjects which he put into service were not only remembered but extended, and usually he wanted to know more.

"That seems to me to be the key to this whole subject of education. We think of cultural education and vocational education as being separate, but I have come to believe that they are interlocking and the way to extend cultural education is to extend vocational education.

Aid To Memory

"Relate what a boy or girl learns in school to his or her career or occupation, no matter whether it is as a mechanic, a housekeeper or educator, and the education will be retained. Otherwise it is largely wasted.

"I believe that as boys learn to use tools, to know electricity and machinery, and to understand the wonders of modern science and industry, they will be more receptive for the so-called intellectual subjects. Let the school curriculum be built so as to relate to every-day life.

"This doesn't mean that it should be turned to making drudges of boys and girls. Rather it will help them to get an understanding of themselves and their abilities, and as they develop their talents they will want to develop their general knowledge."

Program Arranged by North Main St. P. T. A.

A program has been arranged for a meeting of the North Main Street Parent-Teacher association at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night at the school building.

Hector S. Young, attorney, will be the speaker. Music will be furnished by the Harding High school orchestra. Pupils of the sixth grade will present a play.

ENTERTAINS GUESTS

IBERIA, Feb. 10—Four members of the embroidery club and one guest, Mrs. Arthur Schreck, of Galion, were entertained Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Sam McClarren. Luncheon in keeping with the Valentine season was served. Mrs. Schreck and Mrs. C. E. Craley were winners in a contest.

How a warm room and "B.O." (Body Odor) cost her another admirer

LAST NIGHT when they skated together in the park, she had seemed so attractive. But here in the close, warm room her charm completely vanished.

She felt his coolness. The same old story. Why did she always attract men—but never hold them? It had happened so often.

But not now! Today she makes friends and keeps them. For she discovered her fault and the simple way to correct it. Let her tell you how.

* * *

"I could have cried when my uncle, who is a physician, warned me in an indirect way about 'B.O.'—body odor. For I thought I had been so careful.

"But, as he explained, our pores are constantly giving off odor-causing waste—as much as a quart daily. We're so used to this familiar odor that we don't notice it in ourselves. But others do—especially in an overheated room with windows closed. And it always offends.

"So now I've adopted this simple precaution. I wash and bathe with Lifebuoy—and I love it! Lifebuoy makes me feel so gloriously fresh and clean—so safe. For its rich, creamy antiseptic lather purifies pores—banishes every trace of 'B.O.'"

New complexion beauty

Lifebuoy is a marvelous complexion soap. Its gentle searching lather clears away all impurities from the pores. Dull skins freshen. Complexions fairly glow with clear, healthy, radiant beauty. Its pleasant, extra-clean scent—that vanishes as you rinse—just tells you Lifebuoy purifies. Adopt Lifebuoy today.

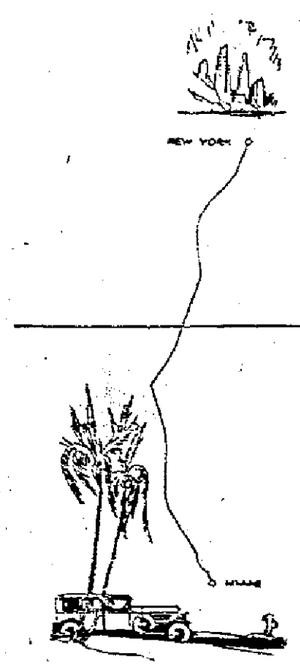
AVERAGES MILE A MINUTE IN 1451-MILE RECORD FROM NEW YORK TO MIAMI WITH AN AIRPLANE-TYPE ENGINE



Shattering the previous record by more than 5 hours and averaging 59.6 miles an hour, the new airplane powered Franklin flashed from New York to Miami in 24 hours, 20 minutes.

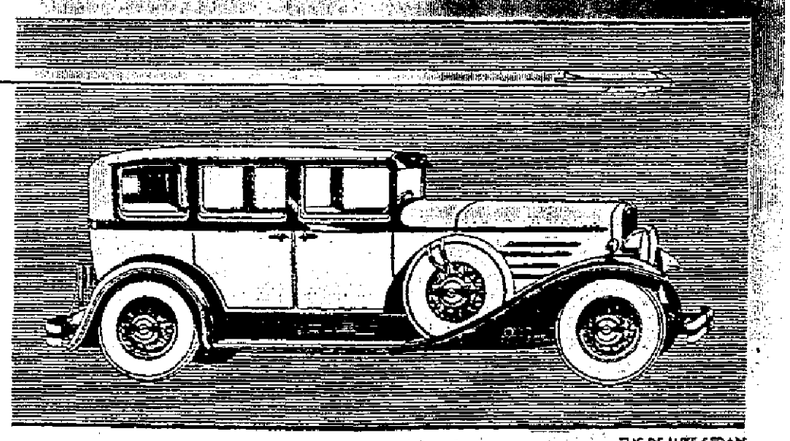
This was just one gruelling test. To prove beyond a doubt the remarkable stamina, power, speed, acceleration and all-around performance of the airplane-type engine, the new Franklin has been put through EVERY CONCEIVABLE TEST.

Triumphantly meeting all laboratory tests, this airplane-type engine was placed in the 1930 Franklin chassis for road tests. Cannon Ball Baker drove a stock 1930 Franklin from coast-to-coast for an amazing new record.

A Franklin motor was then taken from a car and placed into a new Waco airplane. A sensational flight was made which marks the first time the engine of an automobile has ever flown an airplane.

The performance of no other motor car is comparable to that of the 1930 Franklin. And in appearance the car is just as far advanced. The new Franklin is definitely a great factor in the vogue for 1930.

See the car. And by all means drive it.



THE DE LUXE SEDAN

THE 1930 FRANKLIN ALREADY HOLDS THESE AMAZING RECORDS

NEW YORK TO MIAMI—a sensational 1451 mile trip south in 24 hours, 20 minutes averaging 59.6 miles an hour . . . NEW YORK TO LOS ANGELES—8 hours faster than any other car and without a motor stop . . . PIKE'S PEAK ENDURANCE—150 miles—6 consecutive round trips without a stop. Considered impossible before. . . . BUTTE TO ANACONDA—round trip—with an astonishing average of 74.58 miles an hour. . . . SALT LAKE CITY TO OGDEN—with another high speed average of 67.8 miles an hour.

MERCANTILE ISSUES DOWN 2 TO 3 POINTS

Shorts in Radio Hard Hit as Stock Climbs Two in Heavy Trading

BULLS PUSH STEEL

Atlantic Refining Makes Good Progress with High 1929 Earnings

BY W. S. COUSINS
Marion Star Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Feb 10—Both in the volume of business and in the movements of stock prices, today's session on the big board was a tame and unsettled affair as compared with the active markets of last week. Professionals churned around the speculative favorites within a narrow price range in an effort to "get some thing," but in most cases stocks wound up within trading distance of their starting points.

The shorts in Radio squirmed uncomfortable as that stock was up 2½ points to above 42 in heavy trading, but the bears retaliated by cracking Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck two to three points lower. Montgomery was sold on the disappointing sales record for January. Sears Roebuck dropped off to 92 for a loss of 3½.

Around noon the U. S. Steel Corporation issued its January unfilled tonnage report, showing an increase of 51,500 tons in forward business last month. Though this was smaller than expected, it indicated a good pick-up in steel trade in the first month of the new year, which was encouraging for the bulls. Atlantic Refining made an excellent showing in its 1929 report, with $8.79 a share earned last year, of which nearly $2 accrues to the last quarter of the year.

While good progress has been made in the business revival, it is recognized that oil, copper, textile and other important industries have large problems still to grapple with, and the disturbing drop in prices of cotton, grain and other commodities has been an unfavorable factor in Wall Street.

Commonwealth & Southern, Yellow Truck and other low-priced speculative issues moved upward in heavy trading. Yellow Truck crossed 20 for the first time and rose fractionally to 20¾, and Commonwealth Southern reached a new peak at 18 in an extremely heavy turnover.

Atlantic City Plans Merchandise Show

ATLANTIC CITY — An annual national merchandising exposition to be known as the "American fair and described as a "vast dramatization of American industry" will be inaugurated from July 17 to August 27 in the $15,000,000 Atlantic City auditorium.

The fair is to be conducted by the city and there will be no admission charge. According to the announcement of city and auditorium officials the purpose of the fair is to set up a new and unique medium of business for industry of all types throughout the United States.

A considerable section of the fair, according to the announcement, will be devoted to expositions of entire communities which desire to advertise their attractions to the nearly two million spectators who will visit the shore in July and August.

Genius is not hereditary. That's what makes it so elusive.

Review of Last Week's Grain Market

CHICAGO, Feb 10—Heavy liquidation on the unsatisfactory North American wheat situation carried local prices down sharply early in the week to new lows for the crop. Bottom levels were substantially under the Farm board loaning level and seemed to give that body further stabilization measures caused a rally on short covering before the close of the period.

Corn displayed some disposition to climb out of the merchandising rut in which it has been for many weeks. The favorable corn-hog price ratio and continued indisposition of the country to market caused increased interest among speculators. Oats were slightly firmer with corn. Rye was very weak at times, but the trend of prices was generally a reflection of wheat's action.

At the close Saturday, wheat prices were 2¼@2½c below the previous week's finish. Corn was 3@1c higher, oats ¼@⅝c up, and rye 2½@3¼c lower.

News from Canada confirmed the belief on the local trade that the pool was stuck in a decidedly uncomfortable position, and by the end of the week press dispatches indicated that the marketing organization was calling upon the provincial government for financial aid.

While the local trade sees little object in pressing the selling side around term board leaning levels there is the ever present apprehension over the possibility of liquidation of the Canadian holdings to deter traders from committing themselves heavily on the long side.

Meanwhile export trade has been very slow. Small sales, mainly of Manitobas, with a few scattered lots of hard winters afloat, are generally looked upon as unloading of distressed wheat. Broomhall's figures indicate probable North American exports of around 8,500,000 bu per week for the remainder of the season. At this rate, assuming an equal division of domestic and Canadian shipments, domestic experts for the season would still leave an extremely heavy surplus.

Russia Presses Sales

As for the situation abroad, it is at present dominated by competition between Argentine, Australia and Russia. While the probable exports from the latter country are being debated, they continue to offer in the United Kingdom and have already shipped more than 1,000,000 bu. Broomhall estimates their surplus at a possible 16,000,000 bu. which is more than had been expected.

Appointment of a wheat advisory committee by the farm board was looked upon as the initial step in the formation of the wheat stabilization corporation, which under the provisions of the agricultural marketing act, would have broad powers in the purchase and storage of surplus wheat. The farm board is to act officially on the plan for formation of the corporation at a meeting in Washington starting today.

Several leading local speculators were identified with the purchasing side of the corn futures market the past week, which is the first evidence of broadening interest in that pit for some time.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Eggs took an unusual rise in price over the week-end which landed them at 42 to 47 cents a dozen. Grocers say the sale of eggs to bakeries has made eggs scarce in the country, and has been responsible for the unusual price.

Pineapples, at 30 to 40 cents each, are coming to sale. They have played on the market here.

A new shipment of pork loins was offered on market stocks today.

Extra cauliflower is on sale here at 20 to 25 cents a head, grocers report today. Former prices were slightly lower.

LAY FOUNDATION OF TEMPERANCE SYSTEM

Rep. Graham Declares Wets Must Find Substitute for Law

WASHINGTON, Feb 10 Laying of a foundation for a compromise between the moderate wets and drys of the nation by substituting a "temperance system" for the present prohibition policy was disclosed today by Rep George S. Graham, Republican of Pennsylvania, chairman of the house judiciary committee, as the real purpose of the committee's wet bill hearings which begin Feb 12

Banning absolute repeal of the Eighteenth amendment from serious consideration, the 70-year old committee head declared the wets must solve a substitute better than prohibition

On this basis, he said, the first real house hearings on prohibition repeal bills in a decade will assume real importance despite the ridicule heaped by drys upon them.

With both wets and drys centering their attention upon the house hearings—purposely set by Graham to begin on Lincoln's birthday—other developments in the capital, prohibition row included.

Senator Wheeler, Democrat of Montana, was to introduce his resolution for a complete investigation of prohibition and demand prompt action by the senate

TAKE NEARLY 1,000 IN CHICAGO RAIDS

Chicago's Unpaid Police Force Continues Wholesale War on Hoodlums

CHICAGO, Feb. 10—Goaded on by two more wanton slayings, Chicago's unpaid police force today continued its wholesale war and raids on gangsters' garages and hoodlums' hangouts in the last 24 hours has resulted in the seizure of 917 suspects.

Working night and day, uniformed officers and detectives gathered together nearly 1,000 underworld characters and suspects. Of these 271 were herded together in a gigantic showup where recent victims scrutinized them under the glare of arc lights.

The search for gunmen speeded up yesterday when two more lives were taken as one party of motorists poured a blaze of pistol fire into another automobile. These two deaths make the fatalities for 10 days of street gunning here total nine. Two have been seriously wounded.

The victims, Herbert Glenn, 23, and Anthony Kilberg, 20, were shot dead because of a dispute over the right of way with an automobile containing four negro musicians.

Of all the prisoners taken yesterday and last night, no gang leader or lieutenant was seized. Word from gangland was that news of the impending raids was current before the round up began.

Ten of the captives carried revolvers and they will be prosecuted through grand jury action, the state's attorney said. None of these will be charged with one of the nine murders that has roused the public and led to police action, it was disclosed.

AGE TRANSERS BOY FROM REFORMATORY

Sent to Industrial School When Father Produces Birth Certificate

Woodrow Cook, Dameron, W. Va., youth who was arrested in Portsmouth after he had stolen an automobile in Marion, will be transferred from the Mansfield reformatory to the boys' industrial school in Lancaster, it was stated today by juvenile court authorities.

When the youth was arrested he gave his age as 17. Kyle Cook, father of the youth, appeared here Saturday with a birth certificate, showing the boy's age to be 15. Since persons of this age are not accepted at the Mansfield institution the youth will be transferred from there to Lancaster.

JUVENILE CRIME IS TRACED TO HOMES

Youthful Wrongdoing Largely Due to Family Environment, Judge Gast Says

Broken homes, caused by divorce and the modern way of living, were declared to be the cause of a great deal of juvenile crime, by Probate Judge Oscar Gast in an address on "Juvenile Crime" last night at Salem Evangelical church. Judge Gast spent some time on the causes of juvenile crime, and designated broken homes as one of the most important causes. He cited several cases in the local courts that were of interest to his hearers.

The church was filled for the services last night. A large number of members of Bird-McGinnis Post No. 162, American Legion, attended in a body. Judge Gast is a member of the Legion.

Music was furnished by the congregation, and by a Ladies' quartet from Grace Evangelical church. Earl Rohlman sang a vocal solo.

Marion Couple Files Bankruptcy Petitions

Although voluntary bankruptcy petitions filed in the Toledo court Saturday by E. H. Cowan and his wife, Maude Stoltz Cowan, list their joint liabilities at more than $600,000, their actual liabilities will not exceed $25,000, it was stated here today. Due to the manner in which the law provides for filing the bankruptcy reports duplications of claims result.

The bankruptcy action is to clear up numerous claims left unsatisfied in the assignment made some time ago by the Cowans. They were forced to make an assignment of their extensive real estate holdings when realty values took a heavy decline.

Mrs. Cowan lists assets at $375. Cowan's assets are listed at $95.

Rockefeller Never Loses Temper on Golf Links

Takes His "Dub" Shots Philosophically and is Called "Happy Warrior" of Course; General Ames Says He Is Jolly Golfing Companion

Editor's Note—This is the third of a series of articles giving an intimated picture of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., the oil king and word famous philanthropist who is now in his 91st year and in the best of health.

BY JAMES L. KILGALLEN
(Copyright 1930 by I. N. S.)

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Feb. 10—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., never loses his temper while playing golf.

If he "dubs" a shot he takes it philosophically. If he gets a very bad lie he "lifts out" and takes a penalty rather than dig up the turf or scatter the sand. He is the "happy warrior" of the links.

So declared Gen. Adelbert Ames, his golfing companion for years, in an interview today. Gen. Ames is 85 years of age, four years older than John D., and lives in a low, rambling mansion overlooking the palm-lined Halifax river. He has played more games of golf with Mr. Rockefeller than perhaps any other person. He is the only surviving general of the Civil war and the oldest living graduate of the United States Military academy at West Point.

Jolly Golfing Companion

"I have played golf with Mr. Rockefeller ever since he came to Ormond 18 years ago," said General Ames, a weather beaten, silver-haired gentleman as he sat before a log fire in his library here. "That is, I played with him until a year or so ago when I gave golf up because it was overtaxing my constitution.

"Mr. Rockefeller is a jolly golfing companion. I miss our games. While physically he is not an athlete he plays his eight holes every day in the year, except Sundays—rain or shine. He naturally has become a good golfer for a man of his years. Not a Bobby Jones, of course, but few men if any of his age can beat him. I should say in averages about six strokes a hole. He usually shoots around 48 for eight holes."

"Does he ever lose his temper, or throw away his club in disgust after making a poor shot, General?" he was asked.

Is Placid Golfer

"Gracious no, he is a very placid golfer," General Ames replied. "One must be phlegmatic and relax to play good golf and he answers that description. He doesn't indicate his feelings whether he is going well or badly. He takes everything philosophically. If he makes a poor shot he ignores it. Sometimes when he makes a bad tee shot he drives again, ignoring the first shot."

"Ever hear him curse?"

General Ames looked surprised and replied negatively.

"When I first played him 18 years ago I could beat him but it wasn't long before he was beating me," the general related. "One thing about him, he can concentrate. Must have learned that in business. When he concentrates he is perfectly immobile. Once I noticed him standing on the fairway, showing no signs of life, standing there absolutely still. Noting my expression, he said: 'Excuse me, Ames, I was thinking.'"

Exchanges Repartee

People like Rockefeller and stop him on the links to chat, the general said, and this used to slow up their friendly contests. John D. gets a "kick" out of exchanging pleasant repartee with those he meets on the course. He has a large coterie of friends, his old pal explained.

"Mr. Rockefeller is dominating in a day on the links—that is in a friendly way, like a father with his children," General Ames continued. "He takes charge of his foursome and tells his companions when and how to play. But he is not offensive about it."

Smilingly alibying the fact that Mr. Rockefeller's game became better than his, General Ames said he never took a lesson, while "Mr. Rockefeller is at it all the time."

"When I would make a good shot he would hand me a dime or a nickel," General Ames related. "When he made a good shot I tried to give him a dime or a nickel but he wouldn't take it. Once I said to him: 'I don't want to make a beggar of you, Mr. Rockefeller, but I'll bet you a nickel you can't make that shot.' He didn't have the nerve to make the bet."

Rockefeller Never Bet

Asked why not, the general cryptically replied: "I'll leave that to you."

Mr. Rockefeller never bet, in fact, he revealed. He never shows signs of fretfulness or ill humor. He is not a long driver, according to the general, but he rarely gets in trouble because he keeps on the fairway. Yes, it's a fact he chalks his driver to see whether he's hitting 'em right.

The general looked out the window in the direction of the links where John D. was playing at that very moment. With a sign he remarked: "I'd be out there with him today, if I was physically able."

COUSIN OF IL DUCE LABORER IN AMERICA

Man Has Been in Country 21 Years; Has No Desire To Return

NILES, O., Feb. 10—Dominic Mussolini, who toils day in and day out for $4.50 at the Carnegie Steel Mills, at McDonald, near here, is a cousin of the famed Benito Mussolini, Il Duce of Italy, but, as Dominic philosophically looks upon the situation: "What of it?"

"Here they ask you what can you do, not what can your cousin in Italy do. . . I'm happy, so, what of it?"

Dominic has been in this country for 21 years and he says he has no desire to return to Italy and least of all to become a parasite on his famous kin. But, nevertheless, Dominic is a great admirer of his black-shirted cousin.

"He's a born leader," Dominic describes Il Duce. "When we were children and played together, Benito always had to be boss. He's a smart man. He has made Italy what it is today."

Dominic said his cousin may visit the United States soon.

"If he should come, I'll lay off work for a day and visit him."

ON WITH THE DANCE

A True Story of the Younger Set

THE Friday evening dancing party was the week's high spot for the young folks of a certain small country club. A four-piece orchestra always supplied the rhythm until older members conceived the idea that mechanical music would serve the youngsters just as well—and cost less.

Accordingly, a music machine was installed. The plan worked once, but the next Friday the little band triumphantly returned to the job.

"What's wrong with your new music box?" a father asked. "Wouldn't you rather dance to Whiteman and Vallee records than to a tin-pan band?"

Junior shook his head:

"Mechanical music is fine at home but it hasn't the right kick for a dance."

What is true of dancing must be equally true of the theatre. Are YOU getting YOUR money's worth in the theatre?

Sleep

is the most important thing in the world

"Sleep is the most important thing in the world. More important even than food. For we eat to sleep—but we sleep to live. Men have gone 63 days without food and a week without water—but they cannot last more than 10 days without sleep. "Loss of sleep causes a form of starvation, for the food we eat is digested and transformed into new muscles, brain, blood and nerve cells only while we sleep.

"Sleep recharges the exhausted body batteries and fills the organic furnace with fresh fuel. Sleep is a positive process—not a negative one. It isn't merely a stopping of bodily activity. It's a substitution of a constructive process for a destructive one.

"Only while we are unconscious do we fully recuperate. The deeper the sleep, the quicker the recuperation. The lighter and more disturbed the sleep, the more we need of it—the longer it takes to effect repair.

"The quality of sleep is everything. An hour's nap, under favorable conditions, is more reconstructive than an entire night's restless, dream-ridden sleep."

(From the American Journal of Clinical Medicine)

Highly esteemed throughout Latin-America, a man of ability and a fine linguist, Mr. Fletcher should prove a valuable member of the commission.

Following what he took to be the route to which he had been directed in response to his request to be told the shortest route between Waukesha and West Junction, a Wisconsin man drove his car ten miles over the ties and rails of an interurban right-of-way without noting a paved highway running alongside it. The Wisconsin stuff must be simply awful.

Detroit's Police Sensation.

A striking illustration of the extent to which the morale of the police departments of some of our larger cities has been lowered is had from developments in a police board trial of a member of Detroit's detective force.

A detective, Adolph Van Coppenolle by name, is on trial as a result of certain utterances alleged to have been made by him, which he denies having made, in connection with the recent shooting of Inspector Henry J. Garvin, head of the Detroit police bomb and crime squad, by gunmen who overtook the inspector while he was motoring from his home to police headquarters.

Though denying that he ever said that he knew of a plot against Garvin engineered by another Detriot inspector, Van Coppenolle testified that both he and Garvin were marked for death; he for having made certain revelations; and Garvin for having double-crossed certain gunmen in a kidnaping case.

Possibly the detective's statement might not have been taken so seriously had it not been followed by that of Detective Sergeant Max Waldfogel, who in a measure corroborated Coppenolle's intimation that Garvin was implicated in the kidnaping cases which have of late been so frequent in the City of the Strait.

Waldfogel told of police dealings with the underworld, his story easily eclipsing the sensation caused by the testimony of Van Coppenolle. Among other statements made by him, he asserted that relatives of kidnaped persons had told him time and again that they believed Garvin was behind the crimes.

Waldfogel, who has the reputation of having captured or killed more bandits than any other member of the Detroit force, made a further damaging statement in response to a question as to whether or no there had been any kidnapings of racketeers before the organization of the crime and bomb squad under Inspector Garvin. "No," was his answer. "Before the crime and bomb squad was organized, the only kidnapings we had were when some Italians would kidnap a girl and later they would turn up married."

We do not pretend to know the facts in the case, or the worth of the testimony of the two detectives. But the fact that they made the revelations regarding links between the police department and the criminal world of Detroit, and the further fact that they used the name of the inspector shot up by gunmen as they did, made evident that the Detroit police department is in need of overhauling. Whether their charges be true or false, the fact that such charges are made shows a lamentable weakness in the department. In fact, if their stories are demonstrated to be false, it shows a worse condition than would be made plain were they proved true. If proved true, they would indicate less widespread rottenness than would be indicated were they proved false. For if subordinates will, without foundation in fact, utter statements such as have been made by these Detroit detectives it would indicate the possibility of widespread viciousness and a police morale shot all to pieces.

Our Location and Our Weather.

A reader asks which of the Washington weather predictions run each Saturday for the ensuing week, that for the region of the Great lakes or that for the Ohio valley, is supposed to forecast coming weather conditions in Marion county.

The question is not an easy one to answer. We are so much closer to at least one of the Great lakes than we are to the Ohio river, that the first thought might be that the forecasts for the region of the Great lakes should govern, and they probably would under ordinary conditions. But the condition of our location is different from that of counties either somewhat to the north or somewhat to the south of us. It so happens that we here in Marion county are close to the very tip of the backbone of Ohio; in other words, that we are located on the watershed of the state. There is a house a few miles north of this city from the roof of which the rainfall runs two ways; that from the north side flowing north to the Great lakes and then eastwardly through the St. Lawrence to the Atlantic, while that falling on the south side reaches the Gulf of Mexico by way of the Scioto, the Ohio and the Mississippi. This location on the ridge has a decided effect upon our weather. Storms of great force show a tendency to pass either to one or the other side of it. This may be the explanation of the long immunity which we have enjoyed from exceptionally severe wind storms; storms of the destructive kind. But while we escape the full force of the great majority of storms, we're liable to feel the reduced effects of storms either to the north or south. Observation has shown that rainstorms accompanied by little wind are far more liable to pass over the watershed than storms carried along by winds of great force, and thus it is that we get much of our annual rainfall.

Thus in following the weekly predictions of the government weather bureau in Washington, experience has demonstrated that it is well for us here in Marion county to observe the forecasts for both the lake region and the Ohio valley, for our weather is generally a blend of the two, and a little study of the consecutive forecasts and the weather following them will in a short time enable one to make a fairly intelligent guess as to what the weather for the coming week is to be.

We do not hold out any observations herein to have any scientific bearing. The government weather experts may hold that our location on the state watershed has but trifling influence upon our weather, but they will never be able to make our long-time residents who have watched our weather for years believe other than that our location has a lot to do with our weather; that storms are swept to the north and south of us as herein held out.

There is little occasion for surprise that citizens of Chicago have organized a vigilance group. A young Toledo woman has been given a two-year prison sentence for soliciting and accepting money from men, whose addresses she received through a matrimonial agency, after becoming engaged to them through correspondence. President Hoover is said to stand firmly behind his selection of Major General Herbert B. Crosly for the District of Columbia commissionership. The element in both house of congress which has been so strenuously demanding a cleaning-up of Washington seemingly isn't satisfied with the presidential selection to meet the demand. Possibly there may be a fear that he may do it.

Know Your Feet.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

It is of tremendous importance to the general welfare of the body that we have well-developed, sound feet. Yet civilized man has not done very well for his feet. It is fortunate for us that no other part of the body is so long suffering as these useful members.

How many thousand times a day does the foot go up and down the earth, carrying all the weight of the body? These feet of ours are hard workers.

Have you seen a Marathon runner with his feet of wings carrying him steadily, miles and miles, to victory? He couldn't succeed without good feet.

The toe dancer performs with that marvelous piece of mechanism that turns, pivots, dances with ethereal lightness to the musical rhythm of the orchestra! Training of the feet has made this possible.

Why not get acquainted with your feet? Take a good look at it and learn to appreciate it! Right below your ankle is a piece of anatomic structure the like of which you cannot find the world over. Bend, twist, turn it, and the foot moves smoothly. It is flexible and strong.

There are twenty-six bones there, connected by more than four times that number of ligaments. There are endless muscles that play over one another in perfect harmony. This complicated mass of bones, ligaments, muscles, nerves and blood vessels is marvelously arranged so as to enable the foot to bear the body weight, and to permit its owner to walk, run and jump with ease and grace.

The construction of the foot is on the plan of a double arch. One arch runs the length of the foot, while the other arch runs across it. These arches give spring to our motions. They absorb the shock as the foot strikes the ground. Underneath these arches are the protected nerves and blood vessels.

Proper care of the feet is a matter of intelligence. There is the necessity, first of all, of cleanliness. Wastes and impurities of the body pass in the form of perspiration from the feet and the oil glands pour out secretions, so that it is imperative that feet and stockings are kept clean and shoes changed often. After bathing the feet can breathe again.

In walking, do you swing along easily and gracefully—toes straight ahead? Many people do not. The American Indian is a splendid specimen of physical beauty as he runs swiftly along, toes straight ahead, in the direction he is moving. We may take a lesson from him. That is the correct way to stand or walk or run.

Flat feet and weak arches are prevented by walking with the toes pointed straight ahead. In case you have been wearing too high heels for comfort and efficiency, you may have backache or other aches, and lower-heeled shoes will probably be indicated. In such a case, reduce the height of the heel gradually and take proper foot exercises. Walk and be healthy.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES.

A READER. Q—What is the reason for my craving uncooked crushed oats? Is this injurious and if so in what way?

A—Cravings for certain foods may possibly represent a genuine need of the body. At any rate if the craving can be gratified with a flavor, without taking any great amount, it is all right to gratify it.

MISS J. C. R. Q—Will —— prevent one from growing, if taken for reducing the weight?

A—Do not advise it.

* * *

D. L. C. Q—What can I do for enlarged pores?

A—Apply hot and cold compresses alternately, for ten minutes, both night and morning.

* * *

E. H. G. Q—What causes swelling of the ankles?

A—This may be due to a kidney or heart condition. Have a careful examination, including a urinalysis and follow your doctor's advice as to treatment.—Copyright, 1930, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Editorial Opinion.

ABSURDITIES OF PRISON REFORM.

The trial of six convicts for murder growing out of the attempted jail delivery at Auburn in December, which is now under way in that city, acts like an open tap to the coddlers and sob-sisters. Suggestions of reform are flowing from them like tears. Out of the flood we pick two.

A chaplain at Auburn states that prison riots are inspired by the despair born of long sentences. The remedy he proposes is to sentence all convicts from one year to life and then release them as fast as their good conduct in prison warrants. The way that would work, as we see it, would be something like this: A man who had been robbing and killing for years, a Jaborski, we'll say, would be sent up for a minimum term of one year, a maximum of life. Certainly he wouldn't riot if by not rioting he could purchase his freedom in a year or a few years. Certainly he would go to Sunday-school. Certainly he would tell his keepers that he would never again play with firearms as long as he lived! They would let him out; and the chances are that nine times out of ten he would be robbing and killing again within a twelvemonth.

When men who respect "all the prejudices of society" and thereby gain a reputation for uprightness are suddenly discovered to be criminals, as has often happened, who can be sufficiently certain of the reformation of a convict to warrant turning him loose to prey again on society? Occasionally a stiff sentence may work injustice to a man who has recovered his innocence behind the bars; but the premature liberation of the morally unrejuvenated is certain to work injustice to men, women and children whose innocence has kept them out of prison. As between these two classes, we believe the latter to be the more deserving of protection.

Anyway, asserting that prison riots are born of long sentences does not prove it. There is quite as much reason to believe that they are engineered by desperate predatory criminals, who care nothing about their sentences as such, but who resent being restrained from a game in which the pickings are good and the risks relatively inconsiderable. They make a break for liberty, as men sometimes escape from hospitals to their offices, when they find their competitors cleaning up what might be theirs.

The second suggestion is that prison guards be disarmed. The New York Times advocates this in order to prevent rioting convicts from obtaining arms! We are surprised that the Times does not, at the same time, advocate disarming the marines in Haiti lest the natives steal their rifles while the leathernecks sleep. Arms are given to prison guards to neutralize the numerical preponderance of desperate men they are set over. Could anything please the latter better than to have a chance to fight it out with their keepers, whom they outnumber ten or twenty to one, with their messtins? Convicts would not obtain arms from their guards if prison armories were properly guarded and the men on duty were sufficiently trained and disciplined not to allow guns to be taken from their persons.

The need in penitentiaries is not for less arms, but for more discipline, which will keep the arms in the hands where they belong. The need outside of penitentiaries is for more sympathy for society—and less for the anti-social minded.—Detroit Free Press.

CHICAGO'S DICTATORSHIP.

For the first time in the history of the nation civil government in a great American city has broken down. Chicago has been compelled to accept a financial dictatorship in all her business. The same grim experience faces the board of education, the public library, the municipal tuberculosis sanatorium, and will reach Cook county, her officials having given their consent. No other city will envy Chicago the chapter she is writing in her history.

Unthinking officials have carried on for years a riot of spending, with no thought given to the inevitable day of settlement. Gang politics in all departments has been the rule. Counsel was thrown to the winds as funds on hand were distributed, as income for years was anticipated and spent. Every dollar the city may hope to secure during the next two years has been mortgaged to the limit. The city government is broke financially and morally. It is a perfect picture of the results when business management is turned over to gang politicians.

Payrolls for two months have not been met, nor could they be met for two years if the city should be let alone. Private interests have come forward with a proffer of loans for necessary expenses, but they will pay only when bills have been approved by their auditor. The city could not borrow, the governor refused to summon the legislature to grant power to incur new debts. Private funds were available for things necessary in government, but the funds would not be turned over to the elected officials.

Obviously criticism will be leveled at Mayor Big Bill Thompson and the incompetents in office around him, but the real blame should be given the voters who elected Thompson. They are the great sinners against good government. It was their folly that made Thompson the winner. They brought shame to the city. The negligent voter may see the measure of his offence.—Ohio State Journal.

Rural Serbia.

BY TEMPLE MANNING.

The traveler motoring through rural Serbia for the first time, or passing through on the little rumbling railway trains peculiar to the Balkans, will be struck by the apparent lack of modern methods in the daily life of the people.

He will see, for example, men using wooden ploughs, just as Isaac, Abraham and Jacob did in Old Testament times. He will see women and children sowing maize and pumpkin seeds together. They hold the seed in their aprons, throw it into the prepared furrows, and trample it in with their bare feet. When a Serbian farmer wishes to harrow his field, he cuts down bushes, weights them with stones, and drags them across the land. It is an ancient method, but it seems to serve the purpose in Serbia.

But in some respects the Serbians are far ahead of neighboring peasants. Local authorities tax the head of each family 300 pounds of grain each year. This is stored in a local granary and can not be sold until the next harvest has been gathered. Thus there is always a reserve store of foodstuff on hand in case of a shortage, and from this the farmer whose crop fails may draw to meet his needs. Socialism has not progressed beyond this point in any other country, no matter what its boasted state of civilization.

Serbian peasants, as a rule, have not the same love of color peculiar to other races in the Near East. They dress mostly, men and women alike, in white and gray. The men wear linen knickers, linen kilt, linen shirt, and generally two vests, on the inner of which, nowadays, there usually is a chain with an American watch attached.

The native costume is attractive when clean, but it does not keep clean for long. This, and the length of time necessary to don so elaborate a dress, are reasons which are inducing many Serbians to abandon their traditional dress and wear tweeds of a cut similar to those seen in Paris, London and Kansas City.

Dinner Stories.

"It is said that you are always talking politics."

"I fear," rejoined Senator Sorghum, "that the habit is very strong."

"But you sometimes shake hands by the hour without saying a word."

"Very true. But in this great game even shaking hands is a sort of sign language."

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York Feb. 10—Diary of a modern Pepys: Stirred out early by deafening street noises and to talk to Ed Sullivan, who now authors popular tomes, and talked of his old days on the Herald and we wondered whither the winds of chance had blown many reporters of those days.

Breakfasted at Gensemeyer's off lower Broadway and the waiter said it was the oldest restaurant in all the town and there was something pleasant about its dark panneled dignity, too. So home clearing off my desk and found a joyous letter from the late Raymond Hitchcock, which I saved.

In the evening to a radio station to watch Floyd Gibbons broadcast, and much like being behind the scenes of a theater. Then with my wife to browse about a book store and pick up a tattered copy of Grimm's Fairy Tales and home, reading it far into the night.

* * *

A baseball reporter tells me Babe Ruth is the heftiest eater among a crew of men with unusually hearty appetites. He has seen him eat a half dozen hot dog sandwiches—his favorite delicacy—on way home to dinner from a baseball game. Fatty Arbuckle, the erstwhile movie comedian, is a runner-up to Ruth. He has at times stowed away a dozen scrambled eggs along with the rest of his breakfast order.

* * *

However, restaurateurs say vigorous appetites are not confined to men of great physical stature. Big Bill Edwards is, for instance, a dainty eater. And Bide Dudley, the wee paragrapher, polishes off three whopping meals a day with a few raw meat sandwiches in between and has never been sick a day in his life.

* * *

There is a notion that writers, playwrights, poets and editors because of sedentary life are bird-like in their consumption of food. Two of the handiest eaters in New York are Irvin Cobb and Robert H. Davis. They often round in to Will Hogg's for mid-day breakfast and are still eating when the parlor lamps are being lighted. Berton Braley, the poet, rarely stops before the fourth order of wheat cakes at Childs.

* * *

Here are favorite dishes of a number of celebrities: Montague Glass—venison steak cut thin and fried; Ray Long—finan haddie; Charles Chaplin, banana ice-cream; Sinclair Lewis—pork chops; Theodore Dreiser—floating island pudding; Ethel Barrymore—frog legs; Gene Buck—onion soup; Arthur Somers Roche—Boston cream pie; Bernard Gimble—cold goose; Roy Howard—smoked sausage; Flo Ziegfeld—guinea hen, and Rupert Hughes—chicken a la king.

* * *

The oddest dish of all, I believe, is favored by R. M. Brinkerhoff, the illustrator. His piece de resistance—that Berlitz lesson that pop out—is a T-bone steak covered with maple syrup.

* * *

And a well-known singer, who asks me to keep his secret, says he enjoys nothing more than vanilla ice-cream with slices of dill pickle. I wouldn't want that to get out on myself.

* * *

In gastronomic gaping I have observed people eaters are rarely dyspeptic. On the contrary they are almost invariably healthy and cheery, which explodes another myth.

* * *

There are only two dishes that never tempt the democratic palate of this writer. They are creamed carrots and fried parsnips.

* * *

Rambling along like this illustrates the power of suggestion. Right now I could go my way down to the bone of a Kentucky black ham. Indeed I could almost make a meal with a platter of water cress, the absolute Epicurean zero.

There is no end to definitions of success. The possession of money is still far in the lead as an indication of success. Wise Gene White, ninety-three years old, died the other day in New York. For fifty years he served as teacher and principal in the public schools. He left an estate of less than $10,000. Many of New York's leading lawyers, merchants and financiers went to school to Prof. White. They formed the Georgia White Association of organization. At one of the last dinners Mr. White told his "pupils" that many times wealth meant nothing to him, that he was content to accept as his reward the feeling that he had done some good in the world, particularly in the spread of knowledge.

Few men care so little for material wealth. Many say they care little, but they are not truthful. And perhaps few men achieve greater success than the old school teacher if we are to judge by the inner consciousness of satisfaction. What else is there to judge by and what else matters?

Speaking of success, listen to Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah:

"I am drawing dividends on the life I have lived since boyhood.

"I've never, never drunk liquor in my life. I've never smoked. I've always eaten wholesome, plain food and loved work. I never was idle, and never saw a time when I didn't have plenty to do.

"I've wronged nobody. I was fortunate in marrying as perfect a young woman as ever lived. My children have had a marvelous mother, a superb home-maker. Of all the blessings received by me, she was the greatest."

CHURCH PICTURED AS EDUCATIONAL LEADER

Seminary Head Speaks In Local Education Day Program

The Rev. J. H. Harris, D. D., president of the Bonebrake Theological seminary at Dayton, was guest speaker at the First United Brethren church in celebration of "education day" yesterday. His morning topic was "A Crisis in Civilization" and in the evening he spoke of "The Church At a Mighty Task."

Excerpts from his addresses follow:

Dr. Harris said, "Go Teach All Nations." That message met an opposition which held that the church exists for the state and declared for it the ideal that the state is an organization through which individuals may function for the common welfare.

Prepares Way

"The ideal of civil and religious liberty which the Englishmen the Mayflower, the Huguenots in Maine, Carolina, prepared the way for religious freedom, gave us the pioneers who in time unchained the Bible and set free the dynamic of the Gospel in human society. These ideals of civil and religious liberty were transplanted into American soil.

"These early settlers established schools and churches. Eight of the nine colleges established before the Declaration of Independence were established by the church. Some of the colonies held that the home should educate the children, others that the church, and still others held that the community should do the work of education.

"Up to the time the church had taken the lead in the program of education, it was significant that 104 of the 119 colleges established east of the Mississippi river were established by the church.

Church Continues Lead

"The church taught the state to educate. If the church was to continue the work of education and the interpretation of the Bible, which church should take the lead? The state took up the program of education to train children for life's work and as the circulation expended, the Bible, more and more, was crowded out of the schools and the work of religious training was left to the churches."

In conclusion Dr. Harris said: "If our civilization is to endure, the church must rally her force and undergird the nation with moral and spiritual guidance."

A large choir led by E. K. Hill assisted in the observance and other special selections were given during the services.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES TO MEET THURSDAY

President of State Association One of Speakers for Annual Session

The annual meeting of township trustees of Marion county will be held Thursday in the American Legion Dugout, it was stated today by County Surveyor Cecil R. Leavens, who has called the meeting.

Joe R. Thomas, of Hayesville, president of the State Association of Township Trustees, will be the chief speaker, Leavens announced today. He will stress cooperation of the township trustees with state and county highway officials. He will also discuss the township's share of the state gasoline tax.

County Auditor Earl E. Thomas will discuss budgets and a representative of the state examiner's office will discuss ways in which the townships are to expend gasoline tax money. L. Don Jones, mayor of Marion, has been asked to speak on hospital work as it applies to the city and the townships.

Another feature of the meeting will be a discussion of Marion county's road program for next summer. Leavens, who will preside at the meeting, will outline the tentative program.

Every man makes up his mind that the next traveling bag he carries shall cost more.

Coolidge Forgets He Was President To Enjoy Vacation in South, Writer Finds

Looks Physically Fit as He Sits Relaxed in Lounge of Hotel

CALVIN COOLIDGE
BY JAMES L. KILGALLEN
(Copyright, 1930, by I. N. S.)

MT. DORA, Fla., Feb. 10—Calvin Coolidge, former president of the United States, sat quietly in the lounge of the exclusive Lakeside Inn today, smoking a cigar through a long white holder and reading a magazine.

He was relaxed, contented, and obviously enjoying his vacation, he was alone. There were no secret service men around, no reporters—except one. Mrs. Coolidge, attired in white, and looking as charming as when she was "the first lady of the land," sat a short distance away, conversing with several women friends.

The former president seemed neither surprised nor annoyed when the International News Service correspondent introduced himself and sat down. For half an hour or more it was the writer's privilege to chat with Mr. Coolidge, not to interview him. For, it developed, he did not want to be quoted. But, in his considerate way, he provided a "story."

He even agreed to be quoted—to the extent, however, of only 23 words, which shall appear further down in this narrative.

He refrained from discussing politics, business, or the issues of the day. He chatted about vacationing, fishing, what he reads (he has a strong leaning toward history, incidentally), the sights that have impressed him in Florida, the illness of William Howard Taft, whom he esteems highly, and Edison's efforts to evolve a plant that will produce rubber in this country.

No Plans For Future

Mr. Coolidge has no plans for the future. He is enjoying a real vacation and his health is "fine."

He surely looked physically fit. His face is slightly tanned, his eyes bright and his step brisk. He has been resting, sight-seeing, motoring and taking long strolls, very often alone, in the village. After dinner each evening he sits quietly in the lounge of the hotel, smoking or chatting with a few intimate friends. He has few engagements. In a phrase, he is "taking it easy."

He weighs between 157 and 163, he doesn't know for sure himself. He hasn't weighed since he left his home in Northampton, Mass., and then he tipped the beam at 160.

The former president explained that he never really had a vacation until he got out of the White House. When you are president of the United States you take your work with you. Even when you go on a vacation the office is along. You have with you, too, that sense of heavy responsibility. But Mr. Coolidge, even with the burden of such a high office, got along all right. Why was that—was it because he was not "the worrying type?"

"If you do your work right you don't have to worry but if you do your work wrong you have to worry," said Mr. Coolidge.

He agreed to be quoted on that observation which is a meaty summation of Coolidge philosophy.

Spends Much Time Reading

Much of Mr. Coolidge's time is now devoted to reading. Unlike the late Woodrow Wilson, who liked a good detective story, Mr. Coolidge leans toward history. He has no favorite historical character. He reads the better type of magazines and a few favorite newspapers. When he first went to Washington he virtually had to give up reading, his time was so taken up with matters of state.

Mr. Coolidge is doing no golfing. He does not play the game. He has done a little fishing on Lake Dora but can not be classed as an ardent fisherman. He feels that news reports have given him more credit as a fisherman than he deserves.

For a period of 40 years he never fished. The chief reason he goes fishing is to get outdoors and he doesn't care whether the fish bite or not.

He has no favorite sport. He walks a great deal but sees no need of going into training, now that he has only himself to think of.

As Mr. Coolidge chatted, he pointed out a fellow New Englander who had stopped at the mail desk. He was John Higgins, of Somerville, Mass., and well-known Boston lawyer. Mr. Coolidge served in the legislature with him in 1907.

Has Little To Do

The former president's time right now is pretty much his own. While he is a director of the New York Life Insurance Co., he does little more than attend the directors' meetings. It was interesting to learn that his insurance company would not insure.

23-Word Quotation Is Allowed After Chat of Half-Hour

Calvin Coolidge at the age of 17 because he was of too slight a physique. They accepted his policy a few years later, however.

Mr. Coolidge has been greatly impressed by the beautiful country in and about Mt. Dora. The elevation here is about 200 feet and the air is delightful. The quiet, exclusive hotel at which he is stopping is located on the shore of the lake. He has taken many water and motor trips. It is possible to go from this spot in central Florida by boat to the Atlantic and the scenes in the small canals have interested him no little. So have the cypress swamps. He told of seeing one giant cypress tree that was 17 feet in diameter, 50 feet in circumference and 3,000 years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge are the guests at the Lakeside inn of Capt. A. E. Hrubert. He was captain of the Massachusetts state guard when Mr. Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts.

BIG LIQUOR PLOT IS REPORTED REVEALED

Headquarters Is Said To Be in Chicago and Involve 150 Persons

CHICAGO, Feb. 10—Seven months of secret investigation by special government agents has laid bare a gigantic liquor conspiracy involving more than 150 persons and extending from coast to coast, states a copyrighted story in the Chicago Herald and Examiner today.

Having Chicago as its headquarters, the nationwide rum ring has reaped a harvest of millions of dollars by flooding the United States with millions of gallons of alcohol chemically disguised as the choicest of liquors, according to the Herald and Examiner.

The investigation began last July when government agents seized a carload of denatured alcohol shipped by a drug company of New York to an ingenious Chicago chemist, the copyrighted story states.

The widespread investigation that followed disclosed, according to the special agents, wholesale diversion of denatured alcohol from legitimate commercial usages to bootleggers.

STEEL RAILS REMADE AT PLANT IN MARION

Many Useful Products Constructed from Discarded Material

States, the Argentine—last year a shipment to far off Russia.

Bedspring frames, practically all bed frames—are of rail steel, and rail steel is in demand here as in practically every place where it is used, primarily because of its great strength. For by using rail steel instead of ordinary soft commercial steel, about only one-third as much is required to secure the same strength.

Steel scaffolding, such as is used by plasterers and painters, overhead carrying systems, such as are found in the great industrial plants of the country, tractor pads, and many other curious uses are found for this material.

Nor are farm implements the only place on the farm where rail steel serves, for each year hundreds of thousands of steel posts leave Marion, through the Pollak plant for modern Ohio farms and state highway snow fences.

Many notable structures throughout the middle west are knit together with reinforcing bars shipped from Marion. Here in Marion, the Harding hotel, new sewage treatment plant, new theater, and in Columbus the Neil House, Ohio State stadium, Loew's Ohio theater, are reinforced with bars from the Pollak plant. In Detroit, the magnificent new Fisher building, unrivaled for beauty, is reinforced with over 1,000 tons of rail steel bars shipped from Marion.

One may travel from the navy yard at Charleston, S. C., to the great oil refinery plants in Texas and find the products shipped from the Pollak plant at Marion rendering service.

The Pollak Steel Co. located here in December of 1919 by buying the plant of what was then the Interstate Iron & Steel Co., of Chicago. Headquarters of the company, which include the buying and selling agencies, are in Cincinnati.

The plant, of which R. H. Knecht is the local manager, employs 300 men.

Demand for the product of this factory is seasonal, the summer months bringing the greatest demand for rolled steel goods.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 10—Police today sought the vandals who last night destroyed approximately $5,000 worth of women's coats and fabrics, stored in the Hoffman, Miller and Lader Co., here.

1930 ROAD PROGRAM TENTATIVELY DRAWN

61 Miles To Be Surface-Treated This Year, Surveyor Says

able curtailed during the winter months due to adverse weather conditions there are numerous odd jobs that require attention.

At present all county road machinery, including maintainers, rollers, trucks and other equipment, is being given a complete overhauling in preparation for the opening of the spring and summer season.

Safeguarding Traffic

The work being done outside is confined chiefly to making county highways safer for motorists. Approximately one mile of guard rail will be constructed this winter, according to Leavens. Many curve signs and red warning reflectors are also being put up.

A few of the county's trucks are being kept busy hauling stone to places where road surfaces show signs of breaking. The application of stone, however, is being confined chiefly to roads traveled by school buses. Leavens stated today that he was making an effort to keep these roads in as good a condition as possible, thus reducing the danger of accidents.

One job on the road program for next summer is the widening of the Marion-Agosta rd. About six miles of this highway remain to be widened, the surveyor states.

DRAW BATTLE LINES FOR SUB SESSION

Undersea Vessel Will Go on Trial for Life at Tuesday's Plenary Meeting

LONDON, Feb. 10—"Battle lines" were being drawn among the delegates to the five-power naval disarmament conference today as the time approached for the plenary session when the submarine will go on trial for its life.

With a full open meeting of the parley scheduled to take place at St. James' palace tomorrow, the undersea boat, indicted on one hand as a ruthless and inhuman instrument of warfare, and extolled on the other as an economic, effective means of defense, will be placed in the international scales in an Anglo-American move to relegate it to a position where it can do only little harm.

While it has been known since long before the start of the conference that France would vigorously oppose any move toward abolition or strict limitation of undersea craft, the Gallic attack against the American and British anti-submarine proposals came sooner than had been expected.

Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, buttonholed Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson at a friendly meeting for tea yesterday, and expressed a few of the fears felt by his country as a whole if any concerted efforts were made to open the sinkvalves of the world's submarines and leave them open.

The Toll Acidity Takes

When you go to bed dog-tired and still can't sleep and you rise in the morning more tired than when you went to bed, it's a sign you're "acid." Excess acid, formed in the stomach as a result of our unnatural eating habits, causes acid-indigestion with gas, sourness and burning and sets up poisonous putrefaction in the gastro-intestinal canal which saps our strength and vitality and so taxes our nerves that we can't sleep at night or work efficiently during the day.

Magnesia Oxolds, developed in Germany by a famous, 100-year-old pharmaceutical house, correct acidity in the right way! Upon contact with the acid in the stomach, Magnesia Oxolds generate nascent, or active oxygen. The "fire" oxygen stimulates the alkaline gastric mucus, checks putrefaction in the gastro-intestinal canal and stimulates the activities of the intestinal walls which aids the natural movement of the bowels. All three effects are necessary to the true correction of acidity.

5-Day Acidity Test

To ascertain just how "acid" you are, make this test. Get a package of Magnesia Oxolds from Bradley's Drug Store or any other good druggist. Take two after each meal for a few days and see how much better you feel—how much more soundly you sleep and how much more energy you have. If you don't get more than amazing results, return the balance of the Oxolds to the druggist and he will refund the purchase price promptly and in full.—Adv.
